

SPORTSMEN'S COLUMN

Fishing activity in the last week has been varied and limited. The big "outside" has been shelling out (and I don't mean clam-shelling) more fish than any other known source.

However, one of the prominent Rod and Gunners has done himself proud with trout in the river. Gordon Goetz' luck seemed to carry on whether alone or with somebody! Alone he caught seven, "well over the minimum limit, for size" and together with Merrit Kneifel, a friend from Los Angeles, one day's catch numbered 14 and the next day 11.

Then with Ray Kirch, also a visitor from the southland, eight more were landed. These boys, both built like Samson of old, might better have used part of their time and some of their strength to help shove Joe Sierka's 165-foot boat into Smith River Monday instead of messing around with little 14 or 16-inch trout.

Speaking of Joe's boat, which stood off the mouth of Smith River for about five hours Monday while awaiting the proper stage of tide, was finally hauled off to sea again when it appeared that the ground swells were a little too high to risk trying to negotiate the narrow channel.

If and when it does return and is finally worked into its final setting at Castle Rock, it is going to be swell indeed. It is reportedly a German luxury liner, 165 feet long, built in about 1925. Joe's idea is to dredge out and float it into the proper location, then raise it to about the level of the former lodge and use it for living and hotel quarters.

Speaking too of buildings have you seen the foxy little building the cub scouts, with a little assistance from the big guys, have put up on Virg Goldsberry's ideal building site, for such an enterprise? An outside fireplace is also planned and a slick little softball diamond. A recent ruling on scout ages is about to raise havoc with the cub pack as many of them who have become 11 are expected to join the boy scouts, but since many of them fought, bled and labored for good old cub scout cabin, it is likely that they will still be welcomed to its use.

Alas and alack! Brookings Pelicans met defeat at the hands of Crescent City Merchants Sunday to the tune of 7-3, but that has just made them more determined to make it a three-game series by coming out on top next Sunday when the two teams meet at Crescent City.

Game Season For Archers

We know of no one in this area skilled in the use of the bow and arrow to the point of wishing to hunt deer with them but if such there are they will have the advantage of the gun-toters by a deer season opening on Sept. 17, running through Sept. 28, for a deer of either sex and one elk of either sex. Two game refuges are open for them: Mt. Emily Refuge (Union and Umatilla counties) and Canyon Creek refuge (Grant county).

Most of the game seasons are to pen on Oct. 1.

We really shouldn't close this column without mentioning the rather unusual occurrence of Hans Nelson and his fishing partner, hooking a salmon simultaneously and both landing their fish (no proof submitted) without the fish fouling up the other fellow's line. Just good fishermen. Hans caught two Sunday and one Saturday. Wonder how fresh salmon steaks really tastes?
