IT SEEMS TO ME:

By Dewey

The columns of "copy" originating from Washington, D. C., about the fight between the navy and army seems like so much "baloney" to me. Seems to me that on the defense team, everyone wants to be the quarterback—nobody wish to play tackle. It is a ridiculous situation to the average Mr. Citizen.

If I know my history at all, and if I know what branch of service did the most to win the last war, I'd be likely to say "no particular service," unless I'd be likely to add—"The Infantry." It is silly to say and claim that any one service did it all, and is more important. Suppose we look at it this way:

The navy transported the fighting men to their destination, held the enemy off at the beach heads and brought in supplies. The men of the ground forces could not have reached their destination had there been no navy. The navy could never have made any invasion. The air force softened up resistance, but certainly that service did not one thing more. The old dough boys made the landing—took and conquered the enemy.

To any ex-service man, this big quarrel is so much baloney. To claim one service is more important would be to liken one ingredient of bread more important than the others. It seems to me that it is the right proportion that makes up the good bread.

People who could not hear the singers here last Saturday night certainly missed a treat. I never attended any function that gave me more enjoyment than Saturday's charter presentation of the local chapter of S. P. E. B. S. Q. S. A. Others whom I know feel as I do about the affair.

The biggest thing that stands out in my mind about the affair was the democratic way people met for the occasion. I started to figure up the man-miles and man-hours spent by the visitors to be present for this event.

Music did that, folks, music that softens hard hearts enough to make men companions. Sounds trite, perhaps, but such is the case, any way you look at it. Let's forget about that angle for a moment, and look at the other benefits which may be derived from having a local chapter of "barbershoppers."

Maybe I've heard better quartets than the House Brothers, but I don't know where. Maybe I've heard better singers elsewhere, but that is a debatable question. However, there never has been a time when I saw people who enjoyed singing more.

Klamath Falls chapter is made up of people from every walk of life, from "spud" farmers to doctors. They are pals on the stage in an effort to bring entertainment—and good entertainment.

Brookings chapter is likewise made up of the same strata of people—brought together through a mutual hobby. That's good for the community—it will make this community better.

THAT'S RIGHT . . .

One of the latest automobile advertisements reads: "This automobile costs less than you think." Which, in the instance of some of us, is practically nothing.

An Indian, aged 120 years, recently passed on to the happy hunting grounds at the Hoopa Valley Reservation. The record is silent on the point but it would be interesting to find out, if, throughout his long life, he always obeyed the command of well-meaning friends and relatives, who said to him, "Eat it, it's good for you."

Said the chinook to the silver:

"Smellum heap big river."

Said the silver to the chinook:

"Where you smellum river?"

Said the chinook to the silver:

"Smellum Chetco over thar!"

Said the silver to the chinook:

"You smellum big sand bar!"

Recently, over a Sunday p. m.

Walter's Boy. Walter mentioned

some of the sterling qualities of the horse and said that he partly resembled a horse.

Walter did not say which part.

"Our Babs" has again become a princess. Four husbands ago she married a prince. She discarded him for a count. Then she drew a motion picture hot-shot. Now she gets her second prince. They got

Two youngsters, in an eastern city, went forth in search of thrills. They discovered a large hole between two ties on a railroad and found that they could lie down in this hole and let fast trains pass over them.

A policeman, after three trains had passed over the boys, pulled them out of their hole and turned them over to their parents. Let's hope that the parents also turned the boys over. The National Association of diaper distributors has a research bureau. This bureau comes forth with a statement that left-handed parents can change diapers quicker than right-handed parents. We shall now become a nation of southpaws.

A Detroit lady put a nickel into a slot machine. She hit the jackpot and coins scattered about her feet. As she stooped, to pick up her winnings, the slot machine tipped over and fell on top of her. It conked her or the head and knocked her out. One armed or two armed, they are still bandits.

Emily Post has been asked, by someone who wants to know how to behave in public, "when is it proper to thank a waiter." If the propriety of thanking a waiter is based upon the brand of service that waiters have been handing out to the public for the past ten years Emily's answer should be "never."

Coventry, England, has just unveiled a statue of Lady Godiva. The lady was that lovely and legendary heroine of Coventry, who, when taxes grew burdensome to the local citizens, took off her clothes, mounted a horse, and in protest to high taxes rode nude down Main street. Modern Coventryites believe that the unveiling of this statue will have the effect of lowering taxes in that town. We should keep our eyes on Coventry. If taxes are lowered now, in Coventry, each city of the United States should purchase, and erect at strategic points, at least a dozen replicas of the statue of the lady.

Writers continue to grind out books dedicated to the tale of how residents of celestial planets, usually Mars, leave their homes and journey to Earth. Invariably, it is explained, these space beings depart from their home planet because their race is dying out and they must find a new place in which to sprout. As the Martians approach the Earth they should not be surprised to discover a heavy line of travel passing them in the opposite direction.

A feud has flared into bloody war-fare between Somali tribes in French Somoliland. The Issas and Gadabussied tribes engaged in battle. The Issas boys declared, as a reason for all the blood letting, that the girls of their tribe gadabussied too much.

Now you Know!

The answers to everyday Insurance Problems By Pete Lesmeister

Question: The brick wall of my neighbor's garage threatens to collapse at any moment and if it fell, might crush my frame garage which is very close to it. When I warned my neighbor of the possible damage unless the wall was repaired, he said he had a Home Owners' Liability policy which would take care of it. I, too, have a liability policy, but I seem to remember that it does not cover property damage. Can you tell me if I am right?

Answer: You're right. Straight Home Owners Liability policy does not cover property damage. However, for a very small premium the property damage coverage can be added and it is always wise to have it included in your policy.

If you'll address your own insurance questions to this office, we'll try to give you the correct answers and there'll be no charge or obligation of any kind.
