The community hall was the scene of a jolly Hallowe'en party Monday evening, when parents and children gathered for an evening of fun. Ronald McClish put several motion pictures on the screen, and the community enjoyed singing, with Lynn Tracy as leader. Awards were given to children in best costumes. Cookies, cocoa and coffee were enjoyed at the close of the evening. Much credit is due the business establishments of the community for sponsoring the event.

Brookings Schools

By Maryann Biddle

The annual school carnival will be held November 11. There are twelve booths, three under each class in high school.

This year the freshmen will have charge of the ring toss, fish pond and fortune telling booths; while the sophomores will have the penny throw, bingo and the fountain of chance.

The fountain of chance is new this year. You will be interested in watching the balls stay in the air with no strings nor wires holding them.

The juniors will have the pastry booth, the dart throw and roulette. The seniors will have the baseball throw, the hot dog booth and the country store.

If you like to guess numbers and like candy you will like the country store. There will be a door prize, too.

Paul Harris Fund Aids In A Better World "Unity"

Brookings, in her peculiar position, cannot do a great deal in way of the fourth object of Rotary, said Roy Weideman, Tuesday, at the regular meeting of the club, but it can keep abreast of times by studying the work of the United Nations and contribute its share to the Paul Harris Foundation Fund.

The Paul Harris Foundation Fund was set up in honor of the founder of Rotary, and is used to send outstanding students, 20 from United States, and 20 from other countries to any country of their choice, there to study any course they wish for a year. These students are, in full sense, wards of Rotary International, are always guests of Rotarians of the countries where they go, and are actually ambassadors without any portfolio.

Last year, Don Cate, graduate of Pacific University, of Forest Grove, was the Paul Harris Fellow and studied in Switzerland. His accounts, written in Rotary Magazine and other publications, together with his letters to Gov. Bill Schuppel, were classics in themselves. Certainly the Swiss know and understand Americans better for his being there for a year.

This year a young man from Coeur d'Alene, Idaho, has been chosen this district's fellow and expects to study in France. He has served an apprenticeship in the United Nations assembly. He expects to work toward an ambassador's rating in his later life.

This year, four girls, exceptional students in their home nations, are entering colleges of their choice, there to study their chosen subject. One hails from Colombia, South America, and is majoring in public health. Another girl comes from New Zealand, another from England and the fourth from Canada.

These students are proposed by clubs over the nation. These are screened by the districts first, then by the region, and later by the International officers. Last year there were 37; next year the number will be 56; next year the maximum number will be reached, it is the hope of the officials.

Money to finance this gigantic task is raised by assessing each member of Rotary International $10, or its equivalent. This money which will total some $3,000,000-odd will net enough from investments to perpetuate the fund forever, according to the plan. Each student is given a grant of necessary funds, ranging from about $2000 to $3500, depending upon the course, and the country he chooses.

Brookings Rotary club, Weideman said, can do another thing toward the fourth object by acquainting people of the progress made by the United Nations. The progress he briefly noted in his talk, had been tremendous in face of the obstacles over the world.

One factor alone, that of the lost man-days due to malaria, had been drastically reduced by efforts of the delegates to the assembly who made it a point to launch preventative methods in the infested countries.

More programs toward Rotary information will be forthcoming, stated Warren Smith, program chairman, in his rebuttal of the talk made by Roy Weideman.
