IT SEEMS TO ME:

By Dewey

Oregon States College, which had a team that looked just a shade better than a high school team at the beginning of the season, came a long way, and last Saturday, realized a dream that had been for three years. The Orange and Black was too much for the Ducks of U. of O.

Oregon, on the other hand, had a Rose Bowl type team at the beginning of the season—shared that honor last year with California. Each succeeding game, the Ducks became more and more waterlogged, and weaker by the game. The Ducks took a greater shellacking than the score may indicate.

To me, sitting some eight hours ride from Eugene, and also not having seen Oregon play, that the weakness of the team was within the team. To me it looks like the line was not up to par for the Aiken-coached teams. It may be borne out by the number of touchdowns scored through the line, which last year, was nigh impregnable.

Kip Taylor, new mentor of the Beavers, had inaugurated a new system at Oregon State, and his early losses were explainable. He kept his team climbing with each succeeding game—something to his credit. His job was made so much more secure by his win last Saturday, following the defeat of Michigan States the Saturday before.

Thanksgiving comes to this nation today and few of the people fully understand why they observe the day. Do you? Have you taken time out to count the reasons you may have for being glad you live in this country instead of scores of others?

In December issue of "The Rotarian" magazine is an article by a former German coastguardman, now studying at a teachers college in Georgia. He was given this opportunity, don't laugh, by men from the army of occupation in Germany. He tries, in his article, to tell how glad he is of this opportunity—how thankful he actually is.

In the same copy of the magazine is an article telling about the "Rotary Fellows," those selected over the world to carry on their studies at any university of their choice. A Czechoslovakian girl was amazed, while studying in New York, that she did not have to ask the police if she could visit a person in New Jersey. Sounds crazy, doesn't it?

That situation exists in more than half of the world today—and could exist here if some of our people had their way. If we wish to get the full understanding of "being thankful," a trip abroad might do wonders for us. Count your blessings, surely you have more than you ever thought possible.

Today, I hope to visit a brother, 17 years old than I, whom I have not seen for several years, and but few times since 1917. He has wanted us to visit him several times, but Seaside is across the state from this area, and at no time could I put that many days together, until this year.

I hope, through him, to recapture some of the joy that can be almost purely American, with its unrestricted freedom, its liberty, and opportunity. Will be on the job again next Monday.

It is my wish that this day will be one of joy to every reader.

THAT'S RIGHT . . .

The Brencon and Radnor hospital management, Llandrindod, Wales, complains that there is a shortage of bodies for use in the institution by medical students. Anybody who is willing to help out the hospital, in the matter of this shortage, is invited to get in touch with the management. "Coffee goes up to ninety cents a pound" it is stated in a big city newspaper. The price of coffee is too high and should immediately be lowered. It might be in order to remind coffee growers and manufacturers as to what happened to some tea on a certain memorable day in Boston Harbor.

Once upon a time there was a family of quail making their home in a hay field. One morning they saw the farmer and his two sons come into the field. They heard the farmer say: "This hay is ripe. I wish we could find someone to cut it for us." The young quail were all for pulling out of the field but the father quail said: "There is no hurry." A week afterwards two strangers came into the field. The quail heard them talking and listened as one stranger said to the other: "If we cut this hay we must get more pay than we have been offered." Again the small quail were all aflutter, but the father said: "Take it easy. There is no need to leave." Several days later the farmer and his two sons again came into the field. The farmer said, "Come hell or high water we are going to cut this hay ourselves tomorrow." Whereupon the father quail said to his brood: "Come on, it's time to go."

The author of book, "Baby and Child Care" argues that parents should not be alarmed if their child indulges in a little profanity. "A purple passage, or two, is natural behavior in children over the age of six years and merely shows a child is making a bid for independence," explains the author. Yes, to be sure, but what is it when the little darling is under the age of six years?

The husband of Bebe Patton, Oakland, Calif., evangelist, has been indicted by the Alameda county grand jury on ten counts of grand theft. Authorities turn a frigid ear toward the protests that he is innocent of the charges. He might use, as his theme song, "Bebe It's Cold Outside."

In the north Georgia area the inhabitants are complaining about the milk that their cows are giving. It seems that some mountaineers are dumping mash from their stills in the mountain creeks. The cows, quenching their thirst with this branch water, present the milkers with pails full of whiskey flips.

According to the latest report from Washington it appears that the share of the government debt is approximately set at $1,000 per American family. This may be true but we know of one American family where the government is going to have a hard time collecting $10,000.

A new idea is being purveyed to radio listeners. The air is getting bumpy with soliloquies. Some one starts the grind and goes on for a half hour, remembering this and that. In a recent program courtship, marriage, a colored servant, the Secretary of War, earaches, happiness, grief, terror, gloom, drums, darkness, bullets, cannons, the battle's roar, blood, a green dress, and ten nights in a barroom were remembered. The writers of this program should have remembered Hamlet and his soliloquy. That part where the melancholy Dane comments about an odor.

A psychologist was called in by teachers, to examine a boy who was being "very difficult" in school. After he had examined the boy he told the teachers, "This boy only seems difficult to you because he knows the answers to all of your questions before they are put to him. Actually such a boy is a genius." If this is true then, many of our children are blessed with a very high I. Q. Many of them seem to know all the answers.

E. George Luckey, California Democratic leader, states that he will not be a candidate for governor next year. The Republicans of California are smiling. The next Democratic candidate for governor of the state will not be Luckey.

The pastor is concluding his messages in the first Epistle of St. John. Sunday morning his sermon will be "Love and Faith." He hopes that the messages from this epistle have been blessings to many.

The young people of the church have elected Mrs. Don Redfield as new president of the Youth Fellowship. She is planning some very interesting discussions for meetings to come.

In the eighth chapter of Epistle of Hebrews we have the writer's description of the excellent ministry of Christ. He points out once more how Christ's ministry is greater than the priests of the Old Testament. An invitation is extended to all these services.

Not By Bread Alone

"Then there were brought to him little children, that he should put his hands on them, and pray; and the disciples rebuked them. But Jesus said: Let the little children come unto me and forbid them not: for of such is the kingdom of Heaven." Matthew 19:13-14.

"Even so it is not the will of your Father which is in heaven, that one of these little ones should perish." Matthew 18:14.

"Jesus called a little child unto him and set him in the midst of them and said: Verily I say unto you: Except ye be converted and become as little children, shall not enter into the kingdom of heaven." Matthew 18:2-3.

"And whosoever shall offend (cause to go astray) one of these little ones who believe in me, it were better for him that a millstone were hanged about his neck and he were cast into the sea." Mark 9:42.

Christ loved the children in our homes: let us help them and not hinder them in the Christian life. — Joseph M. Johnson, Gold Beach.

The answers to everyday Insurance Problems
By Pete Lesmeister

Question: Is there any kind of insurance which covers parental liability for damage caused by a boy while riding his bicycle? A little neighbor boy rode out of his driveway and ran into a woman who was passing by. The boy's parents offered to pay the minor medical bills but the injured woman, whose nephew is an attorney, has brought suit for large damages.

Answer: This is another case in which Comprehensive Personal Liability insurance would give full protection. Not only would the insurance company cover the insured's legal liability up to the face amount of the policy, it would also defend the suit against him, saving him great expense. The small premium for this type of insurance is well spent.

If you'll address your own insurance questions to this office, we'll try to give you the correct answers and there'll be no charge or obligation of any kind.
