IT SEEMS TO ME:

While there is not yet time to determine the extent of damage done to the lily crop by the frost Tuesday night of last week many growers are becoming a bit more optimistic than they were late last week when many estimated from 60 to 80 per cent destroyed. The Pilot, all week, has been questioning every lily grower possible. Some are pessimistic, others less so, on to hopeful.

One grower, Monday morning, admitted that so many of his lilies had lost their stems, but he claims that he is going to pull out the damaged stems, and carry them off the field, for he believes a new stem will be sprouted in the bulb, only causing to be late this fall.

Perhaps this is the answer, if this man knows as much as he claims. He emphatically asserts that in "cold spots" where he has seen lilies grow, such was done with no ill effects. He did admit, however, that the planting stock for next year would be sadly lacking for many of the bulbets certainly are frozen beyond recovery.

Certainly this froze hit all the lily centers of the west, as far as the Pilot is able to learn. The effect will not be in this area alone but all over the industry. A survey is reported to be under way, trying to determine actual damage to the crop, said to be higher than anyone wishes to believe.

A displaced family from central Europe is reported to be en route here. That is a noble act on the part of any organization to wish to do such an act, for, history shows that people of this type have come to this country, and have made good.

Europeans, long held down in their own countries, find, quite suddenly after arrival here, that this really is a land of liberty—is a land of opportunity—is a place where effort is rewarded by acquisition of property. The influence, often times, means so much to the people who are associated with these immigrants.

Perhaps these people will arrive in this country penniless—but they will not remain that way too long. They will work as no others work, they will save as no others save and they will acquire property and become identified with the community. It seems to me that the influence here should have its effect in the right direction.

The conflict today is not particularly between America and Europe, but between two different ideologies...communism and democracy. People over the world want democracy because they have seen what it can do for peoples.

This community has bid farewell to a number of citizens during the past ten days. In many cases these departed people came here to enjoy the life that only this community could offer in way of life and opportunity.

Curry county has much to offer in way of advancement and it is only too bad that more of the world is not acquainted with its possibilities—its almost perfect climate, compared to others, of course.

Fish Tags Punched For 20-Inch Salmon Or Steelhead, '50

GOLD BEACH—Oregon state game commission met again on Jan. 28, to make final adoption of the 1950 angling regulations. The tentative regulations as announced previously were adjusted and only minor changes were made as applied to the Rogue watershed (Zone 4).

The ban on night fishing for catfishing the water of Rogue was eliminated. The commission reconsidered this former regulation because much recreation is available with night fishing for catfish. The commission believes more law enforcement will be necessary to curtail violations of taking trout while under the guise of fishing for catfish. If anglers on Rogue River will respect the closure to trout, there is no need for similar closures to night fishing in the future.

The proposed punch tag for salmon and steelhead over 20 inches in length was adopted to limit the take of these larger fish to 20 per year. The free punch card is to be used by Oregon anglers, beginning March 1, 1950, and extending to Feb. 28, 1951. Each time a fish over 20 inches in length is caught a punch is removed from the card, and the date and river are entered in the space immediately after the fish is taken. The punch card will be available at all game commission license agencies on or about Feb. 25. The cards are to be retained by all anglers until May 31, 1951, in order that the game commission may obtain a sample for a study of the catch. Specific letters are to be sent to individual anglers requesting the return of their card. Valuable information on management will be worked up from the returned cards.

The card with its provisions for limiting the catch of steelhead and salmon over 20 inches is designed to prevent excessive catches and to distribute the catch to more anglers. Anglers on the Rogue have much to gain with more equal distribution of the catch.

On the Rogue river the bag limit for salmon for the 1950 season will be two fish per day, five per week. The steelhead limit will be three per day and six per week. Of the catch only 20 salmon and steel head over 20 inches in length in the aggregate will be allowed provided not more than 10 may be taken before Aug. 15. The minimum size limits for steelhead will be the same as they were in 1949, but only those over 20 inches in length will require a punch on the card and count toward the annual limit.

All field reports on the Rogue river reclamation project will be in the hands of the Department of Interior officials here within a few days. This project, which if approved by the Department and authorized by Congress, will provide flood control, irrigation and power in the Rogue River valley. The survey has been under way for ten years but thus far no formal recommendation has been made by the department. Department action is now expected within two or three weeks.

Last fall the department told me their study of the proposal would be completed and ready for submission to congress early in January. The failure to meet that schedule was due, I am informed, by delay in the completion of data from the field offices. After all data is in the Was-ington office the project will be reviewed by the program committee of the department of interior. That committee is made up of the bureau heads of the department. It then goes to the secretary for his approval or rejection. If it is approved it is submitted to the governor of the state and to interested government departments for their comments and suggestions. Following the completion of this procedure the report on the proposed project is sent to congress. There is no way of accurately estimating how much time all this routine will take, but I am ready to guess now that there will be no congressional action on the project during this session of congress.

After hearing about the weather trouble in Oregon the last few weeks I almost hate to mention our good fortune here so far as weather is concerned. Thus far Washington, D. C., has had no winter. Usually snow storms and temperatures well below the freezing point is the menu here during January and February. This year January temperatures were record-breaking on the high side. I just noticed that a beautiful pink flowering shrub near the capitol, which ordinarily does not bloom before April 1, is in full bloom now.

Southern members of congress violently oppose the bills which constitute what is called the Civil Rights program. In the Senate the southern minority uses the prolonged debate called a filibuster to block these bills. Due to the size of our membership, all house debate is limited. The delaying action used by the Southerners in the house is to demand roll calls—any members may demand a roll if it is ascertained that a quorum of members is not present on the floor. It takes half an hour to call the roll. On days when the pending FEPC bill (Fair Employment Practices) may be called up, we have been having numerous quorum calls. So much delay prevents action on pending legislation.

The answers to everyday Insurance Problems
By Pete Lesmeister

Question. We plan to leave on a long vacation motor trip within the next couple weeks and a friend suggests that we take out a special theft insurance policy on our luggage, jewelry and other valuables which we take with us. Can you tell us whether we can get a short term policy of this kind and whether its cost is low enough so it would pay us to buy it?

Answer. Ordinarily, if you already have a residence theft policy on your valuables, the simplest and most economical thing for you to do would be to have the "theft away from the premises" clause added to it and to pay the small additional premium. This coverage is usually a good deal broader than that given by a "personal effects" floater policy which you would buy for the duration of your trip. If you don't have a residence theft policy, you should consult your insurance agent before buying any other form of insurance.
