The recently pending Housing bill, which cleared its final legislative hurdle in the house with the adoption of the conference report, extends housing loan provisions and authorizes some more funds for such loans. When it finally becomes law the bill will also carry a section which will be acted upon in the house. This section will lenable cities or other local units to purchase government temporary and semi-permanent housing. This amendment will, I believe, enable the City of Lebanon to make satisfactory arrangements regarding the two federal projects which have been a worry to the Lebanon city administration.

Good weather for Easter Sunday here in Washington brought out so many automobiles that traffic down Connecticut avenue and in the vicinity of the Tidal Basin, where the famous cherry blossoms are in bloom, was almost completely tied up for hours—I managed to get caught in both jams and I can assure you that there are better ways of putting in time on a beautiful Easter Sunday afternoon!

Although the subject is not of immediate concern to Oregon people, I expect you have felt the impact of propaganda being let loos against those who voted for the natural gas bill. Apparently this has been grabbed as ideal for a hot campaign issue by the left-wingers and the socialist minded writers, commentators and politicians.

David Shaw, Democratic candidate for representative, 4th district, returned to the county after a tour of Willamette valley last week.
