Pelicans Edged In Practice Tilt, Sun.

Crescent City Merchants, with four previous pre-season games under their respective belts, had difficulty in making it five in a row, Sunday, by edging the Pelicans 3 to 1 on the local field.

The game, first nine-inning test for the Pels, was a mid-season pitchers' battle practically all the way with Bob Astin allowing three hits in his 7-inning stint, and George Yemor for the Merchants giving up only four hits, at least two of which were scratchy. Astin's wildness contributed to his loss although a tighter defense on the part of his mates and a hit in the clutch probably would have returned him a winner.

The Merchants scored an unearned run in the first on two walks and two Pel errors. The second run, also unearned, came in the sixth on a walk and steal by Knight, who then scored as Bunky Peterson was safe, Hank Westbrook failing to hold Jim Barrett's high throw.

Astin weakened visibly in the seventh and the Merchants tallied their final run on a combination of a walk, a single, two hit batsmen and a wild pitch. Hank Westbrook, down from OSC for the week-end, worked the eighth and ninth for Brookings, only six batters facing him and three of these going down on strikes.

the Pells in all but the eighth, a disputed error depriving him of a shut-out. After one out Matson singled, and advanced on Spangler's infield out. Rich Peterson's wide throw of Jim Barrett's ground ball then pulled Van Lent off first and base umpire ruled Barrett safe. This began a squabble, the Merchants claiming VanLent beat Barrett to the bag. Matson, meanwhile, scored unmolested all the way from second.

Leo Spangler came up with the fielding gem of the day in the ninth by going far to his left and taking VanLent's ground ball, labelled a hit, and throwing to Astin on first for the out.

Next Sunday the two teams will meet at Crescent City, the final practice game before the Pels go to Myrtle Point on Sunday, May 14.
