DEAR MOTHER

From a daughter, long grown, to her mother, on Mother's Day.

How can I begin to tell you all you have meant to me since I came to live with you, a wee mite, so many years ago? You bathed me, fed me, dressed me, washed and ironed for me. You taught me how to play with other children and to properly behave at home and when visiting; you put up with all of my naughtiness, punished me to teach me better; washed my cuts and my skinned knees (I did skin my knees often, didn't I?); tenderly took care of me and let me sleep in your bed (what a heavenly privilege) when I didn't feel well; you gave me dancing lessons which I dearly loved and piano lessons when I wouldn't practice.

As I grew older you guided me into the formation of good habits and were my companion when, at times, I was lonely. You spent much time sewing for me and sacrificed much that I might have suitable clothes to wear to school and for dates and parties. You taught me poise and encouraged self-confidence. I could talk my problems over with you freely. You understood and helped to solve them.

Most important of all, you showed me where to turn for right guidance in all my living—to God, to the study of the Bible—which study has been a steadfast mainstay of my life.

You have been my best and dearest friend for all these years.

To say that I am grateful or that I appreciate the fact that God made you to be my mother is the height of understatement. There are no words to tell you how much I love you. It is a feeling too deep for expression. May the mere words in this note help you to know what you mean to me, Mother dear. Thank you, —Your Daughter.
