"Spirit" is the subject of the Lesson-Sermon in all Churches of Christ, Scientist, on Sunday, August 6.

The Golden Text is "The fruit of the Spirit is love, joy, peace, long suffering, gentleness, goodness, faith, meekness, temperance: against such there is no law" (Gal. 5:22,23).

Among citations which comprise the Lesson-Sermon is the following from the Bible: "Teach me to do thy will; for thou art my God" (Ps. 143:10), together with the following correlative passage from the Christian Science textbook: "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" by Mary Baker Eddy: "Spirit, God, is heard when the senses are silent" (page 89).

Mr. and Mrs. Floyd Swearingen returned home Sunday after a three-weeks trip which took them to New Mexico to visit Mrs. Swearingen's sisters and their families. They were called to Portland from there by the serious illness of Mr. Swearingen's daughter, Helen, who had been flown to the hospital there in a serious condition, resulting from after-effects of the accident she was in south of Harbor a few weeks ago. She has rallied to some extent, but is still in the hospital, under observation.

Club Pleads For A New Library Home

Last week, these columns carried an article: "The Chetco Library is now homeless." Books have been stored at the V.F.W. hall, that was quite a shock to a newcomer to the community.

This library is full of too many things to be homeless. It contains hours of dreaming, days of hard work, much co-operation from the state library, the loan of books from the Smith River library, plus the valuable knowledge of a trained librarian, Miss Mary Cavitt.

Back in Aug. 1945, Hazel Hendry proposed to the Harbor Community Club that a library would be a worthwhile project to sponsor. From then until the opening day, June 13, 1947, committees worked on the numerous details; Mary Cavitt, Hazel Hendry and Ruth Bathiany acted at various times as chairman of the library committee while everyone of the club members took care of such essentials as raising funds collecting books and assisting in any possible way.

The Harbor women felt that the library belonged in Brookings and accepted the offer of Chas. T. M. Echols of a room, rent free in the Central building. Letters were sent to all organizations of the area, with a gratifying response of books and money.

The library opened under the name of the Chetco Community Library, with hours from 4:30 to 5:30 on Fridays with one librarian. Gradually the number of books issued was so increased that it became necessary to open twice a week on Tuesdays and Fridays, with an assistant librarian. Miss Eleanor Stephens of the State Library came to inspect the local unit and had so much praise for the way it was organized and the result which had been obtained.

In Nov. 1949, since the Central Building was to be remodeled, the library made its second move. Earl Templar had generously offered quarters in the hotel, rent free, where it remained until the present time.

Now the library is back at the beginning of the story. The library is homeless, and what can the community do about it? The library board dreams of a new building, a state land site has been mentioned, but is it possible to raise enough money for the small building needed, or could labor be donated, with possibly some donated lumber? Or does anyone know of a centrally-located room which could be used? What suggestions can anyone give?

The library has many Brookings friends who have worked devotedly; Dorothy Lockland has acted for three years as librarian—succeeding Miss Mary Cavitt, whose loss was keenly felt by the whole staff. Mrs. Lockland has been succeeded by Mrs. Dolly Brainard. Other Brookings women have acted as assistant librarians and have given much help in the various money-making affairs.

Another point to remember is that all of these women donate not only their time, but the gasoline for the trips back and forth—the coffee, cup cakes and the other necessary foods to give the dances, teas, card parties. Money is spent only for books and the upkeep of the room.

Reading of good books is an essential part of our children's education. It is a part of every great man's life. It must be made possible for our local children.

Costly Fire Comes From Power Saw Explosion, Wed.

PORT ORFORD—Forest fire, started when a power saw blew up, raged last Wednesday and Thursday on the east side of China Mountain in the Champlin Creek area here and was finally brought under control Thursday evening, after burning over 165 to 170 acres, according to John Marsh, deputy fire warden.

The timber belonged to Coos Head Lumber Co. and was being logged off by Absten and Johnston. Over 300,000 board feet, already felled and bucked were burned, but in the opinion of J. A. Absten, much of the standing timber can be salvaged.

Several power saws were lost, also. However, one was saved, when its quick-thinking owner buried it. Another was carried out of danger.

Over 80 men, led by members of the National and Coos-Curry fire patrols, fought the blaze on exceedingly steep terrain, making trail cutting doubly difficult. The Ken Peterson mill sent its entire night shift into the fight, Stevens mill sent a crew and N. B. Marsh logging crew went in. Marsh, who is also logging up Elk River, in the same area, moved his equipment out to safety.

More than four miles of trail was cut. The fact that the wind changed Thursday morning and the humidity rose, helped considerably in checking the spread. At this time, there is still a crew patrolling the area to prevent break throughs in face of now low humidity and strong wind.

Five parachute firemen from Medford were flown in but due to rough ground surrounding the fire had to be landed at the airport, where Chub Young, deputy fire warden, picked them up. It is said that it was the third consecutive fire they had been to where they had not been able to jump.

Others directing operations in the fight were Keith Young, the chief district manager at Coos Bay and Jim Walker.

John Carter of Berkeley visited Lew Frazier last week on his way through on a trip to Canada on his annual vacation.
