IT SEEMS TO ME:

Football fans, the past week, had a few surprises. Imagine the consternation in South Bend, Ind. last week, when the mighty and much-feared Notre Dame bowed humbly to Purdue, 28 to 14. That hurt a lot of people's pocketbooks no doubt. The daily press and sports writers have been trying to figure that one out.

Michigan State, which lowered the stock of her sister school, U. of Michigan the week before, and was touted to be something of a nation's tops, fell terribly before Maryland. That one did really hurt ego in some spot, most likely at East Lansing, Mich.

Here on the coast a few upsets were noted. Stanford lived up to advance dope by downing OSC by a 21 to 0 score. U. C. L. A., which looked like one of the teams to beat, was beaten by University of Washington by a single point, nevertheless a loss. Saturday at Seattle. U. S. C. had a big football lesson last Saturday at Pullman, Wash., as W. S. C. had them played off the field for three quarters.

People wonder why these upsets occur. L. H. Gregory of the Oregonian is wise enough to see why—and said so in his column earlier this week. Small schools who usually know they do not have a chance, get busy to have a "lot of fun" and for once really play as a team, taking advantage of every break. Being keyed up for such a battle, places the big school at a terrific disadvantage.

Lowly Montana, now out of the Pacific Coast conference, has no greater delight than going out and making things tough for the bigger schools. Ask Jim Aiken, head man at University of Oregon, what he thinks.

California rolled over Penn in an easy manner, putting out no more than necessary to win. The Golden Bears are actually on their way toward another title, with only University of Washington or Stanford to step in their way. Stanford is the most likely team to accomplish that feat, although one should not count out the Huskies from the University of Washington—they, too, might become inspired.

Obtain a sample ballot as soon as you can and study the measures on it. Really, one must get down to study to get the real meaning and intent of each of the nine. The "daylight saving" is so worded that a yes vote will give us standard time always—and a no vote the daylight.

The measure concerning sale of advertised liquors is a poorly worded measure, if I am any judge. This evidently was done with that in mind. Please study the measures.

I am glad to see Gold Beach go ahead with their organization of a Rotary club, for it will be quite an adventure to the men of that town—it will give Curry county added advertising over the world, especially among Rotarians who travel, and there are plenty. A number of the provisional club members were here Tuesday to hear Governor Joe Breckel, and to see what Rotary means to Brookings.

Rotary is a way of life, shall we say. Its motto, "Service above Self—He Profits Most Who Serves best," has a far-reaching effect among men of a community and nation. The good that I get from Rotary is the association with men of other places who likewise give service.
