WELCOME HERE, BARBERSHOPPERS!

Members of the S. P. E. B. S. Q. S. A. visiting this area for the first time, the Pilot wishes to be spokesman for the community in extending you a cordial welcome, and to wish you all the joy that may be expected from the occasion of a Parade of Quartets.

We wouldn't, for the world, try to delude you into believing this is more than just a community—but we are proud of it—quite proud, if we may be allowed to boast a bit. We have scenes here we hope you will find time to enjoy. We have fishing here that we hope you partke and are rewarded plentifully.

Brookings Chapter, No. 675, may not be able to take many prizes at singing, but the Pilot will wager heavily that you will never find better hosts anywhere. These fellows, who, like yourselves, love to sing, have become an integral part of our community—just as you fellows have, back home. The area has been co-operative in aiding wherever and however possible to make your stay as enjoyable as possible. Please feel free to speak, for our people are friendly. If you wish to see more of the community than may be on your limited schedule, surely someone will be glad to take you on some trip, or jaunt as much as time will allow.

This area wishes to remain in your memory as one of delight. We actually wish you can catch the limit in fish. You need not worry about keeping it for Rex and Faye Hayes have facilities to care for most any desired manner of preservation.

Impose upon your singing brethren, they are ready to answer every whim if possible and last of all, the Pilot wishes to extend an invitation to come again—and again—as often as you like.

IT SEEMS TO ME:

By Dewey

I was quite surprised last Thursday morning to have a visitor in the person of Gordon A. Sabine, dean of the school of journalism of University of Oregon. "I am making contact in the field with all the weekly newspaper men," he said in his introduction. "I want to see just what the newspaper men expect of the school of journalism."

I have been in Oregon for ten years, and this the first time such has happened to me. This is the first time that the school of journalism has gone afieid to see what the score was for the graduates which yearly the U. of O. is graduating. I am sure I may say that Mr. Sabine has the most practical idea I have yet to see from any college dean in my entire life.

During our conversation Mr. Sabine talked much about Gene Gould, of Gene's industry at the university press and how well he was learning the trade which is to be his vocation henceforth. "Gene, I believe, will be one of the outstanding newspapermen in a decade," was Mr. Sabine's prediction.

"It is impossible to turn out fully trained men for the newspaper field," he continued. "It is asking too much for a school to accomplish in four years, but we are certainly trying to do our very best in that end. Boys like Gene, who have had practical experience before they enroll in journalism are few. He is more than fortunate in this for he had more than just a general idea of newspaper demands before he enrolled. He knows his goals, and certainly is attaining them."

Long have I been an advocate of training in this manner. It is my idea that youth should be given aptitude tests early in the grades and later in high school, to find their talents, and these talents expanded by a dual educational plan similar to that of Gene Gould. Here is the way I assess Gene's preparation, come next June when he receives his B. A. degree in Journalism:

Gene will have a degree so vital in this day and age, together with five years of practical experience in his field. He will have, at the age of twenty-two, acquired training that many do not have at the age of thirty or older. In his own right, Gene has become more than just an average printer. His years at the university press, turning out the type of work done there, has fitted him better than most all printers old enough to be his father.

I believe Dean Sabine has inaugurated a plan at the University of Oregon which will do much to bring that school in closer and more harmonious contact with the people of the state. I would like to congratulate him on his step, and convey to him this feeling. I believe his visitation to the state's newspapers has awakened him to the actual need, and I look for the course of study to be altered to fit the need as he saw it.

Dean Sabine and I talked shop considerably. I find him practical in all things concerning the newspapers. This, I must inject, is not always the case in my experience in the past twenty or more years, since I, too, was graduated from journalism at the University of Illinois. Like all professions there have been so many changes in the newspaper field—I feel that Dean Sabine is more than abreast with these changes. I look for much under his administration.
