frighten people, it is meant to train people for self-preservation in case of a bomb attack. People should be sure to stay away from large centers which are most likely to be targets for these attacks. Thinly-populated areas may even be spared any attack.

With this training is likely to be airplane spotting, similar to that practiced in the early '40s over this state. It is important to keep enemy planes away from possible targets, for destruction could be held to a minimum in that case.

Before the world will have any peace, I look for it to become much worse. Perhaps I am a pessimist, but the action in China and Korea are boding trouble to my way of thinking. Certainly, if there is ever a third world war, this nation will never be allowed to arm, with buffer nations holding fort in the meantime. Russia, if she ever will declare war, will hit us first in an effort to cripple us first. It is better, therefore, for us to think that way, at least.

University of Washington, the lone northern division team of the Pacific Coast conference in line to question California's domination of coast football, fell in a terrific battle at Seattle last Saturday, so it is now quite certain U. of C. will represent the west in the Rose Bowl, come January 1.

Possibly the greatest disappointment to fans is the failure by both Oregon State and University of Oregon to register a showing this fall. Oregon lost all her games while OSC has little more to show in her favor. Washington State, which has had no teams since the departure of "Babe" Hollingsberry, put on a show last Saturday to dump the Ducks at their homecoming.

Back before the world war—for several decades even before that the West has had the Indian sign on the eastern teams. Western schools, since the war, have been unable to compete in scholarships, etc. Athletes have been going where they could do the best.

To my way of thinking, it is pretty much the fault of the alumni of many of the western schools for the plight they are Wolves howled until some of the old standby coaches are no longer on the scene, and immediately these schools have dropped in the football scene. De-emphasis also has had lots to do with it.

Oregon is making plans to begin training monitors for each area, city, hamlet and community for possible attack by atomic bombs. This country, makers of the first atomic bomb and still about the only nation to have a stockpile of them, must get ready for any eventual occurrence.

For enlightenment of Pilot readers, here are a few precautionary measures to observe: 1. in case of a blast, get behind a solid wall quickly, and stay in that shelter at least a few minutes before stirring away. Here are a few things you may expect, in case of a blast:

Buildings will be destroyed in a radius of a half mile, and damage buildings from that distance up to at least two miles. Would melt metal roofs within a mile, ignite dry materials within two miles; radiation would kill any person within 4,000 feet—maybe more if the wind is in the right direction.

This training is not just to
