Motorists Warned Of Violations Of "Street Parking"

On page two of this issue appears a resolution handed to the Pilot by a member of the highway department who prefers to remain anonymous, but who was emphatic in his statement to this paper that people of this area must stop angle parking on the mainstreet, from the entrance of town on the north, past the Hendricks Furniture store.

"We wish you'd publish this resolution and appeal to the people to stop this violation on their own accord. If they will not, on some day, when east expected, a state police officer will be here, and there may be many fines, and some disgruntled people.

"We know that your main street is wide, perhaps wide enough for angle parking, except that it is also a state highway, maintained and policed as such.

"The hazards here are about the worst in the state, if I may that blunt. Take your cars parked along the street at an angle, narrow the street, until one is obliged to back out into the lane of traffic in order to get away from the curb. Fortunately you never have had an accident, and we hope to keep it that way."

Some two years ago, the highway department renewed markings for parallel parking on the street. People, in a hurry, never seemed to observe these, and once begun the habit grew until no regard is made for the signs.

However, a talk to this highway department man would convince that the practice will and must stop, even at the cost of several dollars before a police magistrate.

Osteopath Locates In Area This Week

In the office adjacent to Dr. R. E. Smith, dentist, Dr. Roy M. White, osteopathic physician and surgeon, has opened up a practice this week, according to an announcement elsewhere in this issue.

Dr. White is not exactly new to Oregon, having been located at Jacksonville for some time, but could not resist the attraction of the coastal country.

Dr. Smith was graduated from University of Arizona, and Kirksville College of Osteopathy and Surgery, and served his internship at the Portland Osteopathic hospital.

Born in Arkansas, Dr. Smith served almost six years in World War 2, most of which was in the Southwest Pacific. He returned to civilian life after rising to rank of Lt. Colonel. He is married, has a boy 6 and a girl 8. He is a Mason and both he and his wife are members of OES.

The family will remain at the Jacksonville home until suitable residence may be found here.

In a statement to the Pilot on Tuesday, Dr. White said he had hopes of building a clinic here some early date, and to expand his facilities considerably.

Our Home, Too!

Our stores, in 1950, do not compare to any previous year, for this year, we feel we have the most "complete" selection of goods ever seen in Curry County, without any reservation. For this reason, we the merchants of this area, are appealing to you to shop first in this area always.

We believe that our prices are fair, and comparable to those found even in the largest cities. We also believe our experiences have taught us your needs, and many of your desires. We have made our purchases accordingly.

Like you, we feel proud of this area, we help pay for its schools, back every civic enterprise as liberally as we can. We have a common interest here—to make this a better place.

Your trading at home, in every possible way, leaves those dollars here to work for the community—your community—ours also!

"Trade-At-Home" Aids Home Cause Merchants Aver

Going on the assumption that "home dollars work best at home" local merchants have appealed to people of the area to try to leave their dollars here in all possible ways, not only in Christmas buying, but the remainder of the year.

Business men of the area, at great costs in the past four years, have improved their places of business and have bought all the stocks they are able, in order to meet local demands and wishes. At the time the Pilot was founded here in 1946, this was not true—stores were not fully stocked—handicaps were many and almost too big for the business people at the time, right after war rationing was lifted.

For the past six or more weeks local merchants have made invitations through the columns of the Pilot, appealing for the local patronage. These merchants believe firmly that they have about the best selections that are obtainable—even in comparison to larger towns and cities.

Almost without exception, every business in the area is using up to double the floor space used as few as two years ago. A survey of the area proves this statement.

More expansion is being revealed almost every day. Latest of which is the Hendricks Furniture Co., which is doubling its floor space in the new addition under construction.

Redfield Grocery, upon its completion, has set a pace for the remainder to follow.

In 1950, just about to close its books, survey reveals several new businesses in the area, all signs of progress once thought to be only in the realm of "fanciful thinking."

All Aliens Must Be Registered Soon

According to a statement made by Goldie V. Smith, local postmaster, all aliens residing in the United States are required, on Jan. 1, or within ten days, to report to the commissioner of naturalization.

These cards, said Mrs. Smith, are available at the local post offices which will give instructions to any who may call for them.

Firemen Will Set Christmas Tree

The annual Christmas tree, under sponsorship of the volunteer firemen of the area, will again be erected in front of the Central Building, according to Ed Thornton, on the committee for arrangements.

This will spike a rumor to the contrary, he told the Pilot, Monday, while announcing the annual Christmas dance, to be held Dec. 25, probably at the Grange hall, although that is not certain.

EMERY WALLACE BELIEVED DROWNED IN CHETCO; MISSING SINCE DEC. 2nd Oregonian Sold To Eastern Publisher

Word was brought into the area Monday evening by Earl Bronson of the disappearance of Emery Wallace from his ranch on Mislatah Creek on the upper reaches of the Chetco, with all signs pointing to his being gone since December 2.

Mr. Bronson, government packer, who lives in that area during the winter months, went to Mr. Wallace's place to ascertain how he "had made it" since the recent storm, and found the carrier on the cable, by which the Chetco was crossed, to have the bottom and three sides broken away, with no signs of anyone around the place anywhere.

Mr. Wallace was careful to keep the entries in his diary up-to-date, and the last one was entered on December 2; also his cow had not been milked, apparently for about that length of time.

The sheriff and relatives were notified, and a party of Ernest and Milton Foster, Will Tolman and Earl Bronson left Tuesday in an effort to locate Mr. Wallace's body, as hopes faded for his being alive. He bought the Mislatah Creek ranch from Will Tolman several years ago, and is well known by the older residents of this area as he and his family lived here many years.

H. S. Chorus To Hold "Carol Sing"

The high school chorus will present "Carols of Christmas" a carol cantata, Tuesday evening, Dec. 19, at 8:15 at the gym, Mrs. Lloyd Morris, instructor, told the Pilot, Monday.

The chorus of 53 voices under her direction has been hard at work for the past two months and is putting forth every effort possible to give a finished performance. Mrs. Harry Lockland is assisting the chorus as accompanist.

Patrons of the school and all are asked and urged to come out and hear this performance.

The Better Half Club is putting up draperies at the club house as Christmas gift to the Rod & Gun Club. Vivian Kirtley is the new president, Erma Goetz, vice-president and Betty Nelson, secretary.

The Oregonian, founded Dec. 4, 1850, and the only newspaper in the United States to have been operated by the same stockholders in that time, was reported sold in the Tuesday issue to Samuel I. Newhouse, of Newark, N. J., owner of several dailies in the east.

The same personnel will be kept by the new owner, it was told in the announcement. The policies of the paper would not be changed, except in steps of progress, for the new owner wishes none of his chain of newspapers to look alike in any manner.

Different papers of his chain have been reported to have taken exceptions to some editorial policies of others. He told the people of Portland that he wanted most for the Oregonian to boost Oregonians, as it has for the past century.

ART STONEHOUSE DIES

Just as the Pilot was being put to press, it was learned that A. E. "Art" Stonehouse had died about 11 a. m. Wednesday morning at his home. No details have been learned.

Mr. Stonehouse, who had lived in the area for several years, had not been in too strong health. He attended Rotary luncheon, Tuesday noon as usual. No funeral arrangements were announced.
