A. E. Stonehouse Rites Held Monday

Christian Science funeral services were held Monday afternoon at 2:30 from the Baptist Community church for A. E. "Art" Stonehouse, who died suddenly at his home last Wednesday. Masonic committal services were conducted at James Ward Memorial cemetery, with Rev. E. C. Hicks in charge. Mrs. Webster Hibbard was reader at the final rites.

Born in Canada, Jan. 24, 1879, Mr. Stonehouse was a graduate engineer, and for many years was identified with lumber interests in Klamath falls, coming to this area about eight years ago, after his retirement.

Surviving are his widow, Mabel, of this area; four sisters: Mrs. Nell Richardson of Hermosa Beach, Calif., Mrs. Etta Williams of Hollywood, Mrs. Elsa Dunne of Los Olivos, Calif., Mrs. Maud Buchanan of Los Angeles.

Long a Rotarian

Besides being a member of the Masonic Lodge, Christian Science church, he was a Rotarian of many years, first in Klamath Falls, and later in Brookings at the time the local club was inaugurated. He was a constant attendant, loyal to the very last.

Final Rites Held For Mrs. Kinion

Scores of friends paid final respects to Mrs. Julia Kinion, beloved wife of Roy L. Kinion, at the Baptist Community church, at 2:30 Sunday afternoon. Rev. John Mumbower, pastor, officiated. Interment was at James W. Ward Memorial cemetery.

Born at Shoal Kentucky, Jan. 8, 1907, she died at Crescent City on Dec. 15, after an illness of several months.

Surviving, besides her widower are: Mrs. Mabel Tierce, Grants Pass; Mrs. Juanita Barton of Brookings, Earl Kinion, of the navy; Rosalee, Evelyn, Roy Victor and Mary Jane, at the home.

She is also survived by her parents, Mr. and Mrs. R. B. Gay of Grants Pass, a sister, Mrs. Adan Gray of dair; Mrs. Mabel Guerin of Grants Pass and a brother, Beecher Gray of Grants Pass.

Mr. and Mrs. John Rogers of Cloverdale, Calif., came for the funeral. Mrs. Rogers is a sister of Mr. Kinion, and Carl, who flew from San Diego to be present, also.

The Kinions have been residents of this area for the past five years.

ARTISTRY OF LOCAL WOMAN WINS HER MUCH NATIONAL RECOGNITION

BY B. MILLER, Author of Azalea Row

Mrs. Maude Sandbo, whose artistic ability in flower arrangements and corsages has long been recognized by local people, has received national recognition. Under date line of Dec. 12, the following story, with pictures of herself and two of her corsages, appeared on the Womens Page of the Christian Science Monitor:

No essential war materials are used by Mrs. Sandbo in her home workshop. She takes what bountiful nature spread before her artist's eye, and with nimble fingers fashions seed and cone corsages.

Her clever corsages are so much in demand for gifts that she always has a waiting list of or-pipe cleaner stems have been manufactured. All else was found by Maude Sandbo's ingenious eyes.

A corsage suitable for brown October days is made of nine different seeds and cones. Alder, date, cedrus deodara, Monterey cypress, pine, Douglas fir, myrtle and eucalyptus trees have contributed to its beauty.

Here is a dainty one of feathers for a young miss attending her first long-dress party. And here is another with the Christmas sparkle of festive evenings.

Although Maude Sandbo uses the cones and seeds gathered in southern Curry county, friends all over the United States and Hawaii have become interested in her business and now send her any unusual material growing near them.

To walk with Maude Sandbo in the woods, or fields as she gathers her materials, is to have one's eyes opened to hidden beauties all about. She uses cones of redwood trees at several stages of development, the green cones are brown, and turn grey as they ripen. Eucalyptus trees yield a small gray seed shaped like a tiny silver bell, and a larger seed quite different.

As we stroll along, she spies at my very feet, some brown, shiveled seed pods. "Wait," With gentle fingers she strips away the brown husk, disclosing within a tiny, fair flowerlet holding black seeds in the center.

"This will add a graceful touch to a miniature arrangement or small corsage."

I thought as I left Maude Sandbo, that she has found the key to a young heart, her interest and enthusiasm in discovering beauty in nature, a hidden beauty challenging her to use its infinite variety.

Mr. and Mrs. Howard Haggerty of Detroit, Mich., are expected here this week-end to spend the Christmas holidays with his twin brother, Homer, and wife. Howard is employed by the Kaiser auto corporation.

HAS "NATURE" EYE

Mrs. Maude Sandbo, whose talents have made a hobby into a vocation—in flowers.

ders. They are suitable for women of any age, for almost all occasions and any season of the year. Maude Sandbo has built a business from her hobby.

When Mr. and Mrs. Alfred E. Sandbo first came to southwestern Oregon and made their home here, Maude Sandbo was entranced by the ease with which a flower garden grew, and by the wealth of wild shrubbery and coniferous trees.

She found pleasure in creating flower arrangements for services of her church and corsages for Azalea Garden Club members. Her friends watched her talents grow with admiring eyes. Soon she was in demand for club programs, and to demonstrate how to make flower arrangements. Blue ribbons were her awards at county fairs and flower shows.

Now the hobby has become a vocation and Maude Sandbo finds in her seed and cone corsages a pleasant way to supplement her income. She is able to do this in her home with materials near at hand.

Here is a corsage, the very essence of springtime. Daisies of satin sheen whose origin you cannot guess. This is a conservation piece. Squash seeds form the daisy petals, the flower center is tiny, yellow tansy flowerlets.

Used with them, of all things is popped corn. Only a little wire, a perky ribbon bow and a few
