

P.-T. A. Named '52 Officers, Wed'day

Officers for the next year were named last Wednesday evening, at the April meeting of the local P.-T. A. group:

President—Mrs. Joe Zumpfe.
Vice-President—Mrs. James R. Felton.

Secretary—Mrs. C. L. Fallert.
Treasurer—Mrs. Don Craig.

A symposium, conducted by students, with Nancy Vincent as moderator, was of interest to parents and members present. Others taking part were Shirley

Kerr, Phyllis Darger, Kenneth Pierce, and Violet Jagers. The subject: "The Young Citizen — Freedom to Grow."

These students showed a mature judgment in their handling of questions.

The boys and girls chorus, directed by Mrs. Lloyd Morris, and a boys quartet, composed of Howard Morris, Fred Panzer, Lloyd Russell and Jerome Nichols, were presented as remainder of the entertainment. Refreshments were served in the home economics room.

LOCAL NEWS

A letter from Emil R. Peterson, historian for the Coos-Curry Pioneer association to the Pilot contained two interesting accounts of the early day facts about Harbor and about Brookings. Coming too late, and being too long this issue cannot contain much of either story. However, these will be checked and will be published at an early date.

The local school board and a number of citizens attended the hearing at Gold Beach, Tuesday, at Gold Beach, with the Rural School Board. No decision was handed down by the rural board, which must meet and make the final decision.

Charles Grayshel promised the Pilot a report on the booth set up at Portland at the Tourist Information showing last week, with a picture. He didn't have time to compile his facts for this issue.

Stephen Gary Province is the name of the 5-lb. 7-oz. son born April 6 to Mr. and Mrs. Dick Province, reports Dr. Roy M. White.

George Darby left Saturday for his home at Marysville, Calif. He had come last week to assist in funeral arrangements for his aunt, Mrs. Amanda Steeves. Miss Mary Stillings, San Francisco and her sister, Mrs. Guy Curtis, Oakland, nieces, were also here for the funeral.

Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Crook of Crescent City are parents of a 6½-lb daughter, born April 3, at Seaside hospital. The little miss has been named Carolyn Jane. Clarence is a brother of Arthur Crook of this place.

E. K. Meadows and Mr. Dempsey, of Crescent City, were business visitors here Monday.

Along Azalea Row

Every now and then someone makes a discovery or patents an idea and we exclaim: "How Obvious! It's been in plain sight all the time. Why didn't I think of that?"

So it is with the use of seaweed as a fertilizer. The tides have brought in and deposited almost at our very doorstep a rich source of organic fertilizer.

It lay unnoticed commercially until just recently when Mr. and Mrs. A. L. Wallace, representing the Soil Renewal Products of Portland came to Harbor and established a factory.

They are now collecting and processing the seaweed, which they market in 50-lb. bags.

I recently visited the Wallaces at their home and factory. Mr. Wallace has spent years in ascertaining the most favorable locations along the coast for the erection of such a factory. They are both enthusiastic about the possibilities here and the use of seaweed in many hitherto untried ways.

Rich in minerals and vitamins of all kinds, it is also an excellent mulch for lawns, shrubs and flower beds. Dr. T. H. Haun of Crescent City, assistant editor of the New Agriculture Magazine, a California publication, uses seaweed in his garden. Visitors to the Del Norte County fair in past years, will recall the blue ribbons won by Dr. Haun, which attest to the superiority of his garden produce under a regime of organic gardening using seaweed as a fertilizer and mulch.

The Wallaces are also experimenting with seaweed as a feed for chickens and other animals.

Seaweed has been used pharmaceutically for many years. In Japan, seaweed farming in which red laver is mostly cultivated, is a considerable industry. The product is used for food in many ways, in making isinglass for the sizing of textiles, and in clarifying beverages. It is also used in paper manufacture and in other scientific work. Seaweed is used for making glue, and iodine is obtained from kelp.

The Wallaces have quite a manufacturing plant on the hill behind their home. A large drying machine which also kills the weed seeds and other harmful products, a machine to chop and grind the seaweed, and to fill the bags. I was surprised at the size of the plant.

I asked Mrs. Wallace how many different kinds of seaweed are found on our Oregon coast. She replied that she had no idea, but there were probably thousands of different kinds just as there are plants growing on the earth.

Processing the seaweed is quite a task, and anyone who feels that it would be simple to collect it from the beach, himself, and prepare it for the garden, will find that this is not the case.
