MONEY DUE ON AMBULANCE

About $1500 still remain to be raised to pay for the ambulance which may be seen in the area, replaced the old and quite undependable one which has outlived its usefulness and dependability. The question in your individual case is: "How much have you donated?"

The ambulance association is a non-profit group, trying to render a service to this community, which has scarcely more than paid for the upkeep of the ambulance. No sinking fund can be laid aside for possible repairs or replacement. This is a case of replacement which is expensive, but an investment which will not need repeating for many years, under normal care.

This ambulance is not exactly the responsibility of the business men of the area. Actually each and every one in the community should have deep concern about its payment, and that soon. It is never known who will benefit to need and demand the service of this ambulance. How much do you care—and how much are you willing to pay toward its cost?

About the area are placards asking for donations. At these places they also have receipts to give you, that you may deduct from your income taxes, and for record with the association. Please do your share, today.

PORT ORFORD OBSERVES FETE

One hundred years ago, next Saturday, Port Orford observes the Centennial of the Battle Rock, a historic event of June 9, 1851. None of us living today, have any conception, any idea what those hardy pioneers endured that day, and those immediately following when reinforcements came from the Umpqua region to save them from annihilation.

Port Orford, it is said, dates its existence from that day, as the first coastal settlement other than Astoria, in Oregon. The Pilot is not informed concerning the history of Port Orford during its initial years, and those up to the turn of the century, except that Port Orford can boast of being the oldest town in Curry County; had the first newspaper, the Port Orford Post; is the most westerly town in Oregon.

Doubtless there will be hundred of old-timers of Oregon present at the celebration, including many from this area, and especially the Chetco Whanglers who will be part of the parade, to officially represent this section of the county. Others, not connected with the Wranglers, have signified intentions of going there to help the Celebration.

IT SEEMS TO ME:

By Dewey

It's heart-warming indeed to see neighbors come to the rescue of those who suffer misfortunes, such as was seen Sunday, up the Winchuck, when Mrs. Waterman's friends came for the day. The men were armed with saws, hammers and other implements of such nature, and the ladies of the neighborhood were fortified with edibles such as hungry people crave on such a mission. From early morning until the last faint sun rays in the evening, there was a building bee—like the pioneers once did.

You recall, Pilot readers, Mrs. Waterman escaped from her burning home about the middle of April with what she had on her body. She saved nothing of the furnishing and of those sentimental items such as pictures, linens and clothing which... there can be no price tag attached. Insurance money can never be sufficient to cover these losses.

However, the neighbors, with boundless love, came early Sunday, worked like beavers in face of a flood, and by night the house was under roof—although not completely finished. Another few hours with the same group will take care of that in a hurry. However, Mrs. Waterman has a roof.

Such acts make me glad that I live in a community which has not lost sight of that human feeling for those less fortunate. You don't have that in the big cities, and you also do not have that in too many towns over the state. Such acts give you the feeling that you live in a big family.

With Pete Lesmeister, business manager for Brookings Pelicans, it is still joy—the Pelicans won Sunday with only part of Pete's team roster on hand. It was the air-tight chucking of Bill Hanauke and the lusty hitting of Hank Westbrook that made the tide swing to Brookings. Bill hurling a 2-hitter, and Westbrook drove in six of Brookings ten runs.

When college terms end, the boys are here on their various respective jobs so they may have twice-a-week practices, so Pete will breathe a lot easier. The uncertainty he undergoes now with some unable to come, is not comforting, especially if you travel 170 miles to a game.

Camp Pacamo Is In Ideal Setting For Youth Training

Overlooking the Smith River on a high hill, Pacamo Camp is an ideal location for a summer camp for boys and girls. The hills at present are beautiful with azaleas, rhododendrons and wild flowers.

Pacamo camp, privately owned and operated by Mr. and Mrs. Lynn F. Tracy, is 14 miles north-east of Crescent City off high-

Mrs. Tracy held a training school for Girl Scout leaders and committee women at the camp on Sunday with invitations extended to Crescent City, Smith River and Brookings.

Members present were first given a tour of the camp and a lunch was eaten in the shelter provided for camp activities.

Mrs. Tracy then gave a two-hour period of instruction which gave the members much-needed information and suggestions when working with girls.

The evening meal was prepared over the campfire with the group participating. Squaw corn, egg and bacon in orange cups, and potatoes were bake with the use of aluminum foil. Using a No. 10 can as a stove it was demonstrated how bacon, egg and toast may be prepared. Honest-to-goodness biscuit twists on a stick were prepared with a hot weiner to insert when the stick was removed. It is needless to say there was plenty to eat.

Going from Brookings were Mrs. Bob Stanhurst and daughter, Sharon, Mrs. Lynn Hampton, Mrs. Al Panzer and Barbara Kay, and Mrs. Dewey Akers.
