IT SEEMS TO ME:

By Dewey

Mounting death toll from auto accidents in Oregon in the past decade caused the last legislature to pass a drastic law on responsibility of the drivers, and many present drivers may find themselves denied the right to drive, unless they check closely on their individual responsibility. There will be a number of the so-called "hot-rod" drivers who are the target of this law.

Right in this town, there is a professional man who boasts he never carried any kind of insurance, and never would, who had better hang up his car keys unless he breaks his resolve to go through life without insurance. Responsibility must be there, be the driver old or young, if my interpretation of the law is correct. In addition, there is no "free accidents" for the responsibility begins Aug. second.

It might be expedient for all car owners and drivers to consult their insurance agents about what is expected—and do that immediately. After the accident or brush with the law will be too late. Question of who is in the right or wrong does not enter into the matter.

Elsewhere in this issue appears an article under Salem dateline, from the Secretary of State's office, giving, in a nutshell the facts concerning the law. This is warning enough to all, heed and be safe.

Am not quite sure in my own mind what to think about the game, Sunday, and the officiating which was evident all afternoon. This is not an alibi, nor is it a way to cover up the defeat suffered by the Pelicans.

I do not want to question the honesty of this official, for the poorness was evident on both sides, but I do wish to note that such officiating will lead to bad feelings between towns and teams in the circuit. Roseburg was able to score three three runs on a fly ball which fell at least five feet foul down left field line.

Brookings, likewise, was presented a few runs, so both clubs are not too happy over the outcome, although Brookings wishes it known that there was no attempt to "buy the game."

Roseburg, to my way of thinking, was not the best sports in their actions after the game. The best way, I believe, would be to go directly to the league heads and place the case, not bait the umpire after the game was over.
