

Speeders On Hwy "Jeopardize" Cars

A professional man of Brookings, who wishes, for the moment to be anonymous, told the Pilot quite a story Monday of his observations of how quickly people wish to die on the highways—and in many instances—are doing just that.

Our for a drive "to get some air," Sunday, he reached the top of "Red Cut" some five miles north, to see two cars which had just collided on that bend of the highway.

Another accident of similar nature happened at the same spot a few moments later. Speed was given as reason.
