FAIR MANAGER IS A BOOSTER

Kenneth Thompson, of Langlois, general manager of the Curry County Fair last year and again this year, is "doing something" to make this fair as attractive to the people of Western and Southwestern Oregon, as any other fair. In the first place, Kenneth believes in telling something of the happenings, together with plans being made to make the fair attractive.

Elsewhere in this issue appears an advertisement inviting everyone "to make a date" for this 1951 event. County exhibitors, naturally, are invited to display anything they wish, in order to make for competition and greater spirit for each succeeding year.

YOUTH CRIMES ARE INCREASING

In Crescent City, last week, The American carried a number of items telling of arrest of youth for several crimes, from petty thievery to attempted rape—which is indicative of the moral breakdown of many youth today. Sunday's Oregonian carried a story under Memphis, Tenn., date-line, telling of a society of non-virgins which is flourishing among high school girls of that city.

Some place along the line there must come an awakening of the people of the world to retain some moral fibre. Schools of the country are not able to cope with the situation—city and county governments can do no more than arrest and charge with crime, which doesn't answer or solve the situation.

A solution, then, must begin at the home level in the lives of these youth. Parents must awaken to responsibility. In most cases, parents must form a new pattern of life themselves, and that soon.

HAS SOBERING EFFECT IN TOWN

Engagement of C. W. Means as deputy sheriff with police powers for Brookings, was consummated last week and already it has had a sobering effect upon the young swain who liked to tip over a few too many drinks and parade their often-times exaggerated inebriety. These young swain just don't appear to be "quite so drunk."

IT SEEMS TO ME:

By Dewey

Chetco Library needs books—especially juvenile books. Who may have some they'd like to donate? How many of you Pilot readers have watched the youth—little tykes from the third grade up, go to the library and take out books. It'd be quite a lesson to you, were you to do this stunt. These youth are just hungry for stories to read—and if the proper kinds are provided, we might see a different attitude in our schools.

Since the library was moved to the VFW hall, I miss seeing the little folk, Tuesday and Fridays, trudging to and from the library loaded with books, some reading as they walk along. Those young minds hunger for stories. Those young minds dream, and think, and seek something to add to these reveries. Don't believe it?

It has been several years ago since my youth, but not too long to remember how I read every adventure story I could put my hands on, and was permitted time to do this stunt. Read, certainly the young read, but they read but half enough to mould their pliable characters. Teachers soon spot the children who read and are encouraged to read. It is so evident in their classroom work.

Chetco Library needs book—I said that before. What are you going to do about it. When the library was formed, I had about five years accumulation of Book of the Month books on hand. I realize these are not juvenile books, but I did my best toward making Chetco library one we could point to with pride.

Brookings in the next few months, and year, will double in population. The already inadequate library will be almost outmoded by then, unless, there are more books forthcoming. This is a plea for the Harbor Community Club, a group of women who want to do something worthwhile for their community.

Each organization of this vicinity should come forward with some entertainment, some plan to raise funds with an express purpose of ear-marking it for the library. In that manner, no one organization would feel the pinch to any extent. A thousand dollars would help immensely to put the shelves in shape for the boys and girls who will be the big patrons of the library. Are you organizations willing to put forth about one hundred dollars in an effort toward this cause?

Cur-Del Cleaners Add Equipment

Cur-Del Cleaners, Brookings' up-to-date cleaning establishment has expanded again, this time with a new device which will not shine gabardines while in the process of pressing.

To concentrate on the immediate area, and Smith River, the Cur-Del Cleaners will no longer include Crescent City in their deliveries, thus insuring faster delivery for local orders.

Marge Cummins has taken the route for the establishment for pick-up and delivery each Tuesday and Friday.

Cur-Del Cleaners made quite a hit with the Canadian visitors recently when they dropped all local work and cleaned the band uniforms so that the group appeared spotless after a long trek when this service could not be performed due to short stays in different towns.
