TELEPHONE COSTS ARE RISING TOO!

Since 1946, our total plant investment has increased more than 75%, and our annual gross construction expenditures have gone up more than 400%. The cost of iron wire has increased 85%; telephone poles and telephone cable have each increased 34%. The top hourly wages of plant personnel have increased 38%.

During this period our total income has also increased, but not enough to keep pace with rising costs. Much of our newly installed equipment is designed to provide better telephone service at lower costs, but these savings have not been enough to balance the scales.

We are now planning an additional expansion program to further improve your telephone service which will total about thirteen million dollars. To obtain the capital necessary to finance these improvements, it has been necessary for us to request increases in telephone rates—the first since 1946. Because of the savings and the increased efficiency our new equipment makes possible, the increases in telephone rates are only a small fraction of the soaring costs indicated above.
