

Sportsmanlike DRIVING

KNOW THE CAR YOU DRIVE

Behind the wheel of a new or strange car, even a careful driver can be a menace, says the AAA driver training book, "Sportsmanlike Driving."

Workers make errors with new machines. So do drivers with strange cars.

An unfamiliar automobile can interfere with your old driving habits. Strange gadgets may confuse you.

Your driving habits were built around the mechanical set-up of your own old car. This is especially true of motor skill habits. Your muscles learned through practice just what force, direction, and time you need to reach and use your brakes, clutch, and gadgets. With a new or strange car, the same force, direction, and timing can be all wrong. The car goes haywire. In a split second, you cause an accident!

Be extra careful when you drive an unfamiliar car. Don't let your old habits fool you. You have something new to learn.

Be alert. You and your new car can cause an accident. Get acquainted slowly with that brand new car!

the good which is ours by inheritance, and which we have heretofore wasted so wantonly.

Too many people care nothing about what they waste. They go into the forest, waste by fire, or by desire to destroy. Others care nothing about observing "game" laws—they like to get by with more than the limit—they poach game and destroy the fun for the generations to come.

Be a good sport in everything—above all, remember that your descendants may wish to hunt or fish as you now do
