Picked up a few newspapers in the past week, and noted, with considerable delight, the trend of thinking toward Eisenhower for President. Seems that he is considered the most capable man in the country today for the job of ironing out the foreign tangle—which it is. He certainly has the confidence of foreign nations—which is not the case with many who would like to have the job of being president.

I look at Eisenhower as a realistic man. Certainly he may not be a politician, a statesman or a politically-polished human, but he certainly is a man with considerable judgment. He organized the invasion of Normandy, a feat that I believe was too big for any other man alive today. He can go to any capital in western Europe and the powers accept him as the man of the hour. Can you say this of any one else?

Perhaps there are many men who knows more about legislation, its maneuvers, etc., than does Eisenhower, but do they understand effects as does Eisenhower? Do they understand the world problems in the manner as does this man who remains so silent on his candidacy?

Our so-called politicians have gotten the country into quite a mess, in foreign affairs, in domestic affairs and with the future as shaky as it is today. do we not want a man who has a "backbone" to carry out what is good? Most newspaper men are indicating they believe Eisenhower comes nearer to being that person. Certainly I do.

People of this area are warned to be a little more careful about leaving their places of business with any amount of cash in the safes. There are "safe men" at work all around us. There may even be such characters among us at this moment. F. B. I. men have been in this community on the look-out for some army deserters.

I never talked to these men, but I learned that they are on the look-out for army deserters who have been doing some "jobs" in the Willamette valley. More information I do not have. Yet, I wish to spread the word of warning to be careful.

Art Guthrie showed quite emphatically last Friday that basketball is a game where teamwork counts. His Bruins were able to come from behind in the third quarter and defeat a determined and quite stubborn Port Orford quintet. "No one man is able to make the team," was the fact Guthrie impressed upon his boys en route home after their almost harrowing experience.

"It's the best object lesson I ever had for my boys," Guthrie said to me, Saturday. "No mat-
