First Section Of 'Edition' Printed

The first section of the Progress edition has been printed and is ready for the date of publication, but procrastination on the part of many advertisers wanting space in the paper, keeps setting the date of appearance back.

Many pictures have been obtained by the Pilot, depicting a part of the growth of the area, and these have been made into engravings, ready for the publication. Another section, if advertising copy is ready, will be off the press this week-end.

A TRIBUTE!

When a soldier performs a service "above and beyond the call of duty in the face of an armed enemy" the government rewards him with a Medal of Honor, and his name and citation is written in the Book of Valor.

We, of Brookings, have no medals to bestow, nor have we a Book of Valor. But we have a keen appreciation of the high courage displayed by our police officer in running down and capturing single-handed, two armed robbers, who had just committed murder. We'll long will remember this act. Well done, Officer Brown.—J. J. Gallagher.
