

For What It's Worth.

By CLIFFORD P. ROWE

One of the greatest needs in the world today, in my opinion, is the ability to understand what the other fellow is talking about. The situation might be improved even more if the fellow who was talking knew what he was saying.

Too often it is the case that after a misunderstanding resulting from a difference of opinion, the one who was responsible defends himself with "But that isn't what I mean to say at all." Therein lies the trouble; we say too many things we do not mean.

Just as the high school youngster describes everything from a beautiful sunset to a high school dance with the words "swell" and "awful", so do adults cheat themselves out of being understood by limiting their vocabularies to a few general terms which are never specific enough to accurately explain their stand.

If then we have trouble making ourselves clear in a common language, how much more difficult it must be to get our ideas across to someone who speaks in a foreign tongue. If those who practice racial discrimination in the south are unable to make their behavior understood by those who live in the north, how can we expect the Russian and the citizen of the United States to understand the basic philosophy underlying the actions of each other.

Democracy means one thing to us and something else to them. Communism means one thing to them and something entirely different to us. That is one reason why I have never had much faith in the Voice of America as a means of showing the Communists in Russian satellite countries the error of their ways.

Until we of this nation who speak the same language come to definite agreement as to what democracy means, I cannot see how we can possibly define it in a foreign tongue.

The Scriptural citations in the Christian Science Lesson-Sermon for Sunday, March 2, on the subject: "Christ Jesus," concludes with these verses from the first Epistle of John: "In this was manifested the love of God toward us, because that God sent his only begotten Son into the world, that we might live through him. And we have seen and do testify that the Father sent the Son to be the Saviour of the world" (4:9, 14).

References from the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" by Mary Baker Eddy emphasize the need for practical proof of Christian discipleship. "Jesus established what he said by demonstration, thus making his acts of higher importance than his words. He proved what he taught" (p. 473). "His consummate example was for the salvation of us all, but only through doing the works which he did and taught others to do" (p. 51). The sermon concludes with the searching question, "Who is ready to follow his teaching and example?" (p. 54).

Temple Meet Held

The temple association of Sidney Croft Lodge, A. F. & A. M. and Satellite club gathered at the V. F. W. hall Saturday evening for a pot luck supper and get-acquainted party. Almost 175 people enjoyed the in-door picnic. Games, cards and bingo furnished entertainment until about 11 p. m. when Ben Jones showed colored slides. Five cars from Gold Beach were present at the affair.

Cub Meeting Set

Parents of boys coming under Cub Scout age, who are interested in having their boys participate, and who wish to help in the program, are asked to be at Baptist Community Church at 7:30 p. m. Friday, Feb. 29.

This is a re-organizational meeting, according to Bob Dimmick, who is heading the movement at the moment.
