

BOTH BEEF AND TREES SHOULD BE SENT TO MARKET WHEN PRIME!

There's Gold In Your Farm Woodlot

No. 5 (Fifth of a series of six articles on second-growth forests as a cash crop, prepared by private, state and federal forest agencies)

When your trees have passed their period of most rapid growth (about 80 years), the best policy is to clearcut and start a new crop either by natural seeding from close by mature trees or by hand planting. You should also clearcut woodlots where repeated thinnings have finally left too few trees.

Ordinarily the species growing on your land, generally Douglas fir, is the one best suited. Douglas fir reproduces best on clearcut areas. Seedlings like the shade of weeds and light brush to start, but when once established need plenty of sunlight. If the clearcut area is small, from 2 to 20 acres, and it adjoins or is surrounded by seed-bearing trees, it will reforest promptly by natural seeding. Fire must be kept out and stock fenced out. If there is a good seed crop right after logging the area will come back fast.

If you have had a good seed year you may want to leave your slash and provide better fire protection. Otherwise you will want to burn your slash the first time it's safe to do it and put your land in shape for the next tree crop.

If your land tends to grow brush, you will want to hand plant immediately to give your valuable timber crop a chance to get started before the brush slows it down. Even without brush, natural refore-esting takes from 2 to 10 years, so you may want to get your crop of trees in quickly with nursery stock. Trees can be obtained from the State Forestry Departments of Oregon and Washington and some companies will supply nursery-raised seedlings to farmers. Winter planting is best and it comes when the farmer has the most free time.

Hand planting of seedlings requires some thought and care. A simple mattock, one of the hoe-type of tools, is all a tree planter needs. With one stroke of the mattock a suitable hole is opened to admit the roots of the seedling. Care should be taken to avoid leaving air space around the roots, to see that roots are straight and not turned up, that the tree is not too deep and that ground cover won't choke it out. Plant seedlings to get advantage of natural shade of stumps, down logs.

If you plant 4 by 4 feet spacing you will need 2720 trees per acre. Ideal is 6 by 8 foot spacing using 910 trees per acre, although some prefer 8 by 8 with 680 trees. Trees cost about $5 per thousand. Next we will discuss logging, land clearing, interesting facts.

(For more particulars write your State Forester at Olympia, Washington or Salem, Oregon for your free copy of "YOUR TREES—A CROP," how to grow and harvest them in the Douglas fir region.)

Airmail Restricted To Overseas APOs

Post offices have been notified by the postoffice department that after March 15, airmail packages for members of the armed forces served by APO numbers will be restricted to a maximum of two pounds and a combined length and girth of 30 inches. This has been found to be necessary as the number of planes available for taking the airmail overseas has been inadequate to handle the quantities mailed. The maximum of 70 pounds and combined length and girth of 100 inches is still in effect for parcel post packages sent by surface transportation.

Notice To Public

Those persons digging shrubs or plants on the property known as Azalea Heights are trespassing and will be prosecuted as such, if this practice is not stopped. Otherwise the area will be closed to the Public.
