

HOW IT BEGAN

How 26-year-old Ralph E. Cope, Jr., of Langlois, has become one of the nation's outstanding dairymen is told in April issue of Country Gentleman.

Cope is the owner of Opal Crystal Lady, the world's champion Jersey cow which has broken all butterfat records.

The article tells how Cope started his first 4-H project at the age of nine, raising a grade Jersey bull which won a ribbon at the county fair. In 1944 he and his father bought a package herd of seven heifers for $850 from another Oregonian, F. J. Kreutzer, and among them was a big, fat 2-year-old registered as Opal Crystal Lady. Because she was oversized, Kreutzer had branded her for butchering.

When Opal freshened in December, 1944, she was rated so unpromising that Ralph did not save her calf, the article says. But at the end of 1945 he wished he had, for for Opal was proving herself a veritable "milk factory." She set a new all-time mark by producing 1064, 1035, and 1237 pounds of butterfat in three successive years on twice-a-day milkings.

Portland U Lists College Honor Roll

In a letter to the Pilot, Ralph Vincent, former resident of this area, told that both Nancy and Jimmy, students at Portland U. were on the honor roll for the winter term. Nancy was one of the group to make a 4-point average, and the only girl to have that honor. Jimmy, who is school photographer, and mixed up in many affairs, came up with a 3.48-point average.

Both Jimmy and Nancy were graduates of Brookings High and were honor students here. Jimmy was valedictorian of his class and Nancy was salutatorian of hers.

Ralph stated that he would be in this area as soon as he felt weather permitted to do some lumber mill photography. He is "free-lancing" in photography at present, after serving years as press photographer for both the Journal and Oregonian.

Birthday Party

Virginia Akers' birthday was celebrated Sunday afternoon with a postponed party at her home. Fifteen girls gathered to enjoy games of bingo, "sorry" and scrambled letters. Prizes went to winners. Present were Janet Glass, Carol Rausch, Joanne Darger, Dorothy Rowley, Melody Brimm, Joy Gott, Phyllis Cole, Sandy Way, Alline Sanders, Kay Nichols, Dixie Allsup, Joan Harper and Janet Crump. After the cards and gifts were opened, refreshments were served with assistance of Mrs. Irene Crump and Mrs. Alice Rausch.

IV—CURACOA

Our last re-fueling stop before Antwerp, was a charming little island, off the coast of Venezuela called Curacoa. Its inhabitants are black and total up to about 100,000.

The Dutch chose this island on which to build one of the largest oil refineries in the world. The crude oil is produced in Venezuela, then brought to the island in tankers. The Dutch were very far-sighted in locating their refinery on an island that they actually owned, thereby avoiding the possibility of being invited to leave, as the British were in Iran. Last year 7,000 large ocean-going ships came into this port, that's an average of 20 a day, so this is a very busy little island.

One of the most interesting things about Curacoa is the river highway which splits the island in two, along this highway come the ships which are the livelihood of the island. People and autos cross the span of water by way of a pontoon bridge, in the event of a passing ship, the bridge is hauled to one side and free ferries are then used for transportation across the river.

The floating markets are located on the water highway also. These sail boats come from Venezuela and sell such things as beets, sugar cane, onions, garlic, lettuce, etc. There is no form of vegetation grown on this island. Oil is their sole source of income, an example of that may be shown by the fact that on this small island there are 8,000 cars.

We arrived luckily on the last day of the festival, as everywhere were masqueraders, laughing, singing and dancing in the streets. Everywhere I went I was impressed by the cleanliness of the island and by the respect shown me even though I was in the minority. (To be continued).

Ike's Campaigners Due In Oregon

SALEM — Top-flight national figures headed by Paul G. Hoffman, former head of ECA and now directing the Citizens For Eisenhower Committee, will be in Oregon to speak for Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower during the coming primary campaign.

This is the word received by William L. Phillips, chairman of the Oregon for Eisenhower committee.

In addition to Hoffman, Oregon will hear from three U. S. Senators, James H. Duff of Pennsylvania, Frank Carlson of Kansas, and Oregon's own senator, Wayne Morse.

Oregon's primary election, on May 16, is the final one in which people can express themselves on Ike, as the Republican nominee for president prior to the Republican national convention at Chicago, opening July 7.

Phillips declared that the Eisenhower leaders, both national and state are anxious for Oregon to give Eisenhower an outstanding vote, one which will carry its impact into the GOP Chicago convention.

Phillips received a report from Hal Short, advertising man who just returned from visiting the Eisenhower headquarters in New York.

Short reported that through recent changes in personnel in the Eisenhower organization on a national level is now a smooth and efficient operating one with Hoffman as the over-all director of operations.
