Republicans Voters Boost Ackley

Republican voters of the Seventeenth Legislative district, comprising Coos and Curry Counties, will select their party nominee at the primary election on May 16. In letters and direct word from many over the area the Pilot reaches weekly, the sentiment seems strongly in favor of Ed F. Ackley. This is understandable.

Many months ago the Pilot endorsed Ackley. Since that time the Pilot has had no particular occasion to alter its opinion. However, it has been noted that Ackley has been gaining ground all over the territory.

The Pilot, and his friends, have faith in Ackley, that he knows the needs of the area, and will represent the district faithfully.

Ackley's greatest strength seems to lie with the Republican voters who wish to see Southwestern Oregon be recognized as an economic part of the state, and who want his "fighting" ability in legislature.

Co-operation Is Base For Strength

Marshall Dana, in his dedication talk, Saturday afternoon, at the Plywood Plant, keyed his remarks with, "What a wonderful thing a little co-operation can really achieve." Marshall Dana was referring to what could be accomplished by the people of southwestern Oregon if all effort were directed toward a better living and a fuller life as reward to growth of the section.

While here in this section people may have honest differences of opinion, it has been noted many times by the Pilot that when the good of the community was at stake, there was always, or nearly always, a compromise. Today, we are reaping the benefits of that co-operation in this area. Greater rewards are coming because that co-operation is getting stronger and stronger.

Readers of the Pilot should reflect upon what is needed here, and then work toward that end. Better application of "in unity there is strength" should be applied now.

Along Azalea Row

By Faye Sunderland

The flower arranging class held at Mrs. Warren Smith's home was worth while and thoroughly enjoyed by all attending.

"Adventure in Color", one of the divisions in the coming flower show schedule, is creating a lot of interest. It offers something entirely new—such as an all-green arrangement using a green container and foliage, fruit or flowers or a combination of all three in tints, tones and shades of green. Or how does "black and white magis" sound to you? I can just close my eyes and see a satin black bowl containing an all-white arrangement. Sounds pretty exciting, doesn't it? Or under the same classification you may dramatize the values of red.

Under Class VII designated novelties is one just called miscellaneous. That will be a good excuse for you to drag out your old dishes and see what you can dream up. Perhaps you have grandma's old huge sugar bowl stuck back in the cupboard. It's much too large to use for sugar nowadays. It was made for an era of large families and large breakfast, when everyone started off with a big bowl of hot cereal and lots of sugar and cream! But just take a look at it. Exactly the right size to hold a bouquet of flowers. Maybe you have an old piece of milk glass (or like me, a good reproduction). How about that old soup tureen or the old footed vegetable dish, the hand-painted fruit server or the old cut glass compote. Nearly all of us have something old that is stuck away. They make lovely "conservation pieces" and wonderful for a flower show entry.

Also in novelties would be any of the many clever figurine type containers so popular now.

Decide now on your containers and start practicing. Make different arrangements and get the family's reaction. You'll be surprised how they'll chip in with suggestions and the first thing you know Dad will say he can do just as well and enter something in the Men's division and junior will start working up something for the Small Fry division.
