In Memoriam

It was an inspiration to have known Lucille Molino. She has left us a fitting and lasting memorial which she built, humbly herself.

We who were privileged to have been associated with her learned from her more than any course in humanities could teach, for Lucille understood and walked and talked, feelingly, with all mankind. Extreme physical suffering through much of her life, and to the end, was borne with fortitude and only served to mellow her understanding.

Her place in the community will be hard to fill. She was a ready worker in the P.T.A., the Girl Scouts, the Curry County Health units, the ladies' auxiliary of the V.F.W., the Eastern Star, and her own home. An artist with a needle, she made most of the Chetco Wraglers' beautiful shirts and blouses.

We are especially sorry for her family. Their loss is just too great for us to comprehend.

Mrs. Roy Molino died at Peralta Hospital, Oakland, Calif., Oct. 23, following a short illness which came to a sudden climax. She was born in Salt Lake City 44 years ago, had lived much of her life in the Sacramento Valley and about San Francisco Bay, and came to Brookings about eight years ago. Besides her husband, she is survived by her mother, Mrs. John Dandis, of Richmond, Calif., among many relatives in that area.

Mrs. Molino had been very active in many community projects, in which she utilized her early training as a community health worker. She and her husband, an employee of Hanscam's store, Harbor, celebrated their silver

Hermit Committed To Salem Institute

Al Herman was born in Australia, some eighty years since and learned languages from a private tutor. As a young man he migrated from his homeland to South America where he rode horseback from Veneduela to Patagonia. That took five hours and three years. Then, northward, crossing the River Plate, to work for years with cattle along the fringe of the Matto Grosso.

He came to Brookings when the big mill was running and left this past week, a senile old man who wouldn't have annoyed anyone as he did, had he been wedding since coming here.

Funeral and commitment services were held in the Bay area Monday.

Many, many people feel sorry that Al Herman should have become dangerously hallucinated toward his good neighbors and just had to be taken to Salem.

"Herman the Hermit's" cabin, under the bluff on what's now the Tisdale place, will probably know its long years' tenant no more.

Mr. and Mrs. Fred Moore are in Portland this week on a buying trip.

A card was received from Mr. and Mrs. E. F. Ackley, mailed at Pensacola, Fla. They report a wonderful trip with good weather. Accompanied by Mrs. Warnock, they expect to return some time this week.
