Rasmussen Offers Eggs, Poultry

To meet the demand of an ever-increasing city and surrounding area for fresh quality AA eggs, and those fresh, fat, delicious chickens, there is now in operation the new Rasmussen's poultry located approximately three miles south of Brookings on Highway 101. This new enterprise which now merchandises its eggs through the Brookings Market (look for the yellow label on the sides of the cases) specializes in the big ever-popular brown eggs. The eggs are brought to market every other day, thus assuring a ready supply of the kind of eggs you people have long been waiting for.

Not yet finished is the slaughtering house which will, in the near future, be packing for consumption, locally raised broilers, roasters, and fricasse hens.

The Rasmussens (Fred and Doll) cordially invite all of you to drop out and make their acquaintance.

As yet there are no telephone facilities, but in the very near future they hope that this service will be available so that the people in this area can place their poultry orders for locker or home use.

They aren't bringing the bears in by the ones or twos any more, but by the jeep load with four at a time. One day last week Fred Gardner and his sons, Swede and Harold, drove down from the Upper Chetco country with their jeep load of bears, which had been trapped and shot on Red Mountain prairie. One of the animals weighed well over three hundred pounds, with the other three a little smaller, but still large enough to look big if any of them had been alone.
