Uppman to Sing On Community Concert

Theodor Uppman, California born baritone, will appear in the second of the Del Norte Community concert series on Friday, December 5, at the Elk auditorium, Crescent City, at 8:15 p.m.

During World War II Uppman sang for GI's all over France and Germany and also gave several recitals for French relief. In 1947 he won the Atwater-Kent auditions and the Gainsborough Foundation award. That year and the next he sang in movies, "Mourning Becomes Electra," and "Mr. Peabody and the Mermaid" was another.

He has been seen in musical comedy on the West Coast, has been heard on various network programs and in a number of opera performances up and down the coast and in New York.

His creation of the Billy Budd role in Britten's opera of that name in London was a triumphant success in 1951 and 1952. This autumn sees him returned to the United States for a comprehensive concert tour and appearances on radio and television.
