Big Industries Eye This Locality

Right at the moment this area is going through the throes of growing travail, the transition from one phase of prosperity to a better one, and those who have investments here can be encouraged, and sure, that their confidence in this locality will surely be merited. This period is disturbing to investors and business in general but another two months will see acceleration of all activity in general for better outlook.

A number of the country's largest industries are exploring the feasibility of establishing plants here. There are concrete reasons for this opinion and when approached Ed F. Ackley, attorney, said, "I would not be surprised to see a great deal of new industrial activity within the next six months, as several very large corporations are looking on this area with great favor.

A good percentage of our business men are of the same opinion. Almost the "Last Frontier," this southwestern Oregon coast is a natural haven for expansion of businesses and as a resort center it is bound to attract many.
