WHAT THEY SAY REGARDING SCHOOLS

AS AN INTERESTED PERSON and a taxpayer of Curry County I would like to make this constructive suggestion concerning the needs of the schools of this community.

ED THORNTON—I think the school board is doing quite well. I would like to see a better school here with more teachers.

VIRGIL GOLDSBERRY—The voters are going to have a chance to approve of a bond issue to construct a 300-student high school which will be complete with gymnasium, domestic science, manual training and music room. With the above subjects and general science, provided we can carry on the whole program through bonding.

The plans of the school board are to have a scale model that the public may see. There will be sketches to see what it will look like before they vote and that should be very shortly provided.

My main suggestion is that voters should examine program for needs of school and turn out to vote.

BERNICE M. WARD—I am in favor of anything that is for the good of the schools. Our children come first.

FRENCHY ARRELL—Expanded school facilities so the children can go all day. Chemistry is a must for high school and that should be added to subjects available.

MRS. C. ED. DEMPSEY—I have always been for better schools. Bonded money properly handled will bring better schools. Well-educated children make for a better community and it is impossible to have well-educated children without good teachers and good schools.

ROY BROWN—Biggest need of school is adequate room. Two-shift system is of great disadvantage to both student and teacher.

MRS. ROY BRIMM—I would like to see an increase in the subjects the students can take in high school. They need more variety of subjects.

LARRY ROEMMICH—Additional rooms are needed and teachers need more cooperation from parents, both in disciplining and training children.

Teachers are too lax on children skipping school. Missed school work should be made up beforehand and not later.

MRS. RAY NELSON—The grade school should be expanded so children could go full time. For the amount of taxes we pay we should have more benefits for the smaller children such as bus pickups.

DON CRAIG—I am in favor of a lot of improvements in our school but I think they are adequately being taken care of here with the proposed new construction and enlargement program.

I am definitely in favor of the program started here.

MRS. E. H. GROOTENDORST—By improving our schools we would attract more people to this community.

MILDRED M. BYRNE—More encouragement should be given the high school students in this community to go to college, and they should be more adequately prepared for advance study. Minimum credit requirements for college entrance is not sufficient preparation.

MRS. IRA BROWN—I believe in the Golden Rule backed up by a 3-foot ruler. Our children will learn more if they are taught to respect their elders. We are too lacking in discipline in both the home and school.

CAROL BENSON—The school is too crowded and bigger rooms are needed to take care of students that are expected in the future.

Letter From Washington

By HARRIS ELLSWORTH, M.C.

Upon receiving assurances from members of the House Ways and Means committee—(a) that the committee would hold a meeting and that the matter of continuing the so-called excess profits tax would be brought up and acted upon; and (b) that a delay in such action beyond the deadline date of June 30 would not matter since the tax can be renewed for the entire six months' period even if the renewal action is not taken for several weeks, the House majority leadership did not call for a vote on the resolution adopted by the Rules committee calling for House action on the extension bill.

This is the best method of handling the matter, of course, but as I pointed out in my letter last week, the House was in effect, blocked from consideration of the tax extension legislation so the majority leadership took the only means available to break the deadlock.

With the end of the first session of the new 83rd Congress in sight (the target date for adjournment is July 31) here is a quick summary of accomplishments to date and what is pending—for action either during the remaining days of this session or early next year:

Work accomplished: A Department of Health, Education and Welfare created; the President's power to reorganize agencies extended; the long fight over oil-rich submerged tidelands within the States' historic boundaries settled; five reorganization plans made effective; several appropriation bills enacted into law; federal rent control extended to July 31 this year, and in critical defense areas until April 1954; allowances paid to dependents of servicemen extended for two more years; suspension of import taxes on copper extended until next year, and minor changes in the housing act effected.

Awaiting final action: All of the appropriation bills except for the Defense department and for foreign aid have been passed by the House and are rapidly being disposed of by the Senate.

The House has passed an extension of the Reciprocal Trade Agreements act with an amendment providing for increasing the membership of the Tariff commission by one member. Senate is expected to act soon.

The Hawaiian Statehood bill passed the House but is at present bogged down in the Senate as a result of committee action in including Alaska in the bill. There will probably be no action on this legislation until next session.

Hearings on amendments to the Taft-Hartley Act have been held by committees in both the House and Senate, but thus far no bill embodying amendments has been considered by either body.

A bill providing a method for disposing of the synthetic rubber plants owned by the government has been passed by the House and is pending in the Senate.

Considerable other legislation is pending, of course, including my timber access road bill, H.R. 4929. However, the new session picks up right where this one stops, so that any bills pending now can be acted upon as they are reported after the new session begins. Undoubtedly the House will act upon several other bills before the end of July and no doubt many of them will be completed by the Senate and sent to the President. The House will likewise act upon legislation which has originated in and passed the Senate.

For What It's Worth

By CLIFFORD P. ROWE

I read an article the other day in which a group of clothing manufacturers were lamenting the fact that men were so lacking in originality in the cut of their attire. Their plea was that the males should carry their share of the burden of being attractive along with those of the opposite sex. They say you can't teach an old dog new tricks. I hold it is equally true that it takes an extremely long time for some people, old or young, to get a simple fact beaten into their consciousness. It is about time that clothing manufacturers awakened to the fact that men will never be the suckers for their wares and wiles as are those of the feminine gender.

Man resigned himself long ago to the ways of women with their clothes. He doesn't even kick when a change in style (regulated to occur quarterly) cleans out the clothes closet in order to make room for the new, wrecking the budget in the process. When he plighted his troth, he swore to make the little lady happy; and if dropping the skirt length or the neck line or both will keep her purring and contented, he will go along with the gag.

But when the vultures who fatten on style changes try to get him on the merry-go-round of mode of the day, they are swooping over the wrong carrion. It was my good fortune to witness the great change when man emerged from the button shoe, calf tight trouser, elastic garters and detachable collar. That was his day of emancipation for this century, and to expect any further radical deviation before the year 2000 is to show more ignorance of the makeup of man than should be expected in an age dominated by women.

As long as man is the hunted, there is no need for any element other than comfort in the clothing he selects. It is she who pursues in a highly competitive chase who must resort to the wiles of witchery, based on a philosophy that that which is different from yesterday is more likely to attract attention today and thus perhaps bring an end to the trail on the morrow.

The wise man will always seek to dress in such a manner as to blend with his surroundings. Thus he is less likely to be noticed and more and more likely to remain free longer.

Local News

From all appearances it must have been a volunteer crew which worked on the huge tile culvert on the school grounds Friday. No hired gang could have been so conscientiously industrious nor could those working there be expecting wages. Two bulldozers were roaring, all day, filling in as the tile were layed under Charlie Echols' watchful eye. The whole deal was in continuation of the exceptional community spirit.
