

Student Body Sees Demonstration

The first meeting of the Brookings-Harbor High School student body watched Mrs. Doherty's Senior English class give a demonstration of parliamentary procedure Tuesday morning.

The demonstration was part of a program, which included a number presented by the girl's chorus.

Main business activity was the setting of the student body fee, and the appointment of a committee for the presentation of the Freshman assembly.

Roy Dirks made a few remarks concerning the danger of "squirreling", before the meeting, presided over by Student Body President Ray Westernen, was closed.

Fire Losses At New Low

Private and state forest fire protection men throughout Washington and Oregon are rubbing their rabbit feet for luck.

Not since man has kept records of forest fire losses have these two states had such a remarkably low acreage burned by forest fires. Unusual is the fact that lightning fires almost equal man-caused blazes. Generally man-caused fires run nine to one over lightning.

In Oregon, through the end of August, losses on state and private lands were 803 acres from 247 man-caused and 259 lightning fires.

In Washington only 740 acres had been burned through August, from 652 fires, forty per cent of these being lightning fires. A fire in Clark county in mid-September took almost 1000 acres, which will raise that figure.

Losses on U. S. Forest Service land in the two-state region through August 31 totalled 720 acres from 773 fires, only 145 man-caused.

"The big danger," said Roy F. Morse, chairman of the Industrial Forestry Association, "is that people might get too self-confident and too smug. That's when we always have our worst fires, when people get careless."

The forest leader urged continuance of simple precautionary measures. He listed them in this order:

1. Use your ash tray if you must smoke when travelling.
2. Be sure you build campfires in a safe place away from hazards. Then, be sure you drown out a campfire when you leave it for any length of time.
3. Loggers should check all power equipment against spreading fire. Loggers should also make sure they have fire tools handy at every side.
4. Slash and brush burning should not be done except by permission of proper state fire authorities.
5. Hunters and sportsmen, above all people, should be sure campfires are out, smoking is done only in safe areas and not while travelling in woods, and that fire is treated with the respect its power demands.
