LETTER TO EDITOR

A Spirited Defense

Dear Editor,

Not having a column in which to defend my self from my friend Ruth Smith's surprising answer to my New Year's Resolution — all the more surprising since the resolutions were set forth at her own request—I must take this means.

I would not wish my friends and fellow villagers to regard me as churlish in the matter of Christmas cards. No one enjoys the holiday season more than I, with the attendant festivities and thought of friends both near and far.

I love Christmas cards winging their way across the country with messages of love and friendship, news of friends in far places. It is only when I come to my own village that it seems sometimes to be a needless duplication of friendly Christmas greetings which could be used as an expression of Christian joy in some constructive community project.

There are such movements across the country to do this very thing. Telephone employees in Baltimore, Md., make a substantial gift to the society for crippled children in just this very way. No cards where the spoken word may be uttered. Instead, the charitable gift.

Our presents of cranberry bread, candy, cookies and other goodies to friends and neighbors near at hand tangibly express our Merry Christmas wishes. Our open homes do the same. And in this category fall the handmade Christmas cards and scenic views from a neighbor's home—these to be treasured and saved!

You all know very well which cards I refer to. Even as you address them you have the same thought I have.

But to each his right to make and break his New Year's Resolutions! And the old cards do make lovely shopping lists and nut baskets!

B. MILLER.
