THE YARDSTICK MOVED
The Yardstick dealing in yardage and drapery materials moved quarters the first of the month from Pine street to downtown across from the Chelco Drug. Pearl Marquette, owner has living accommodations at the rear of the business.

OSC STARTS FOREST EXPERIMENT STATION
Oregon State College—A forest experiment station has been established by Oregon State college to help Oregon's timber industry solve present-day problems and better plan for the future. OSC's forestry research, which dates back to 1927, will be expanded under station plans to include all phases of forest management and products.

Special attention is planned on second-growth timber; regeneration of forests, including soils, insects, diseases and utilization phases; and water conservation as related to forest management. The station will cooperate closely with other public and private agencies doing forest research including the state board of forestry and the Oregon forest products laboratory, which is located on the OSC campus.

Paul M. Dunn, dean of forestry, will be station director. A committee of forestry staff members with George H. Barnes as chairman will work with him. Research will center in the 13,500 acres of OSC forest lands.

PAUL SEZ....

Axine and I went to Roseburg for Mother's Day and coming through Grants Pass a large Truck pulled up alongside us with a blast on his air horn. After getting back into my skin, I recognized the driver as one of my old customers from up North. We both pulled over to the curb and had a nice visit. (Axine says it was nigh onto an hour).

He was driving a new INTERNATIONAL truck hauling produce out of Sacramento. Of course he had to show me every thing about his rig—and did tell me his brother-in-law was driving the 1948 INTERNATIONAL I had sold him and it had just turned ONE MILLION MILES on the same run. There is a lot of satisfaction in selling a man that kind of equipment and being associated with a firm building a quality product.

Next time you need new equipment or service on your present unit why not drop in and see us here at DAVIS TRUCK & TRACTOR. Remember—we service what we sell right here at home.
