HAVE FAITH IN THE COMMUNITY
WHERE YOUR IDEALS CAN BE REALIZED

Brookings area is by far the finest community in which to live. The people are above average. The town is alive and growing. The climate is ideal, making it a community known as the "Home of Winter Flowers." Opportunities are here for new businesses and businessmen. They are welcomed without reservation.

Mr. and Mrs. William Phelps are leaving us. They have worked hard giving the community all of their time and energy. They have enjoyed it here and wish that they might have found it possible to remain at the helm of the Pilot.

Beginning this week the Brookings-Harbor Pilot will be under new management and edited by new people. Mr. Raymond Pisarek and Mr. Joseph Murphy come well recommended from Wisconsin. They are good people that will be an asset here and should be received with outstretched hands. They are anxious to meet the people of the community and will make a determined effort to give the public service.

Mr. Murphy and Mr. Pisarek have stated that they do not expect to make any drastic changes in the policies of the paper. Their efforts will be directed rather towards furthering the interests of the founder which will be to give the community a newspaper of which it can point with pride and which will be an expression of the area.

In a few months the new home for the Brookings-Harbor Pilot will be completed. That completion will be the realization of a dream. It will be a large well built home with extra space allowed for expansion of business to meet the needs of this growing community.

It is by coincidence at this writing that two years ago today the people of Brookings Harbor rallied to find two of its citizens who had been lost. They were found.

PIPE DREAMS
BY JOE MURPHY

Modesty prevents me from writing about myself. However, I would like to say a few words about my partner, Bud Pisarek, in the fond hope that perhaps he will reciprocate, and say something nice about me in his column.

Bud, first and foremost, is an artist. He isn't, however, the odd ball type of artist, who believes that eccentricity spells genius. Which is not to say that he doesn't have a few bad habits, such as not smoking a pipe.

He is 27, married to Nancy, and father of a husky 2 year old named Todd. Bud is a native of Milwaukee, has spent two years in the army, and holds a masters degree in art education at the University of Wisconsin.

Bud has taught art for three years, two at Clintonville, Wisconsin, and one at Whitewater state teachers college. It was there that he decided to come to Oregon, where men are men and there isn't a Sen. McCarthy.

He isn't a complete novice in the newspaper field. He was editor of Pope's Poop—a shipboard newspaper during his army days on the way back from Japan. He was a part time sports writer for a Wisconsin daily, and has created a comic strip for another Badger paper.

You'll be seeing a lot of Bud and Nancy around the Pilot office, and you'll be seeing a lot of Bud's work in the paper, and hanging on our office walls.

We were fortunate in meeting Bud in our collegiate days, and then again at Clintonville. We have been the closest friends during all this time, except perhaps in the heat of a sheephead game. Only those folks from Wisconsin will recognize that word sheephead, but take my word for it, Bud is an expert.

BRIDAL SHOWER

A bridal shower was given for LaVon Wagner by Mary Montgomery and Janet Thomas. It was held at the Wm. Skopec home in Harbor on August 12.

The bright looking youngster you see in the strip above is the Lil' Pilot. A trademark of good service to you readers. Your wishes are his command.

The Lil' Pilot is friendly, personable, and quite clever. Meet him every week in the pages of this paper. Ask him to be a regular visitor to your home. A yearly subscription saves you money. Read his ads, there are bargains galore. Let him give you an estimate on any job printing you may need. Stationery and letterheads are his specialty. Call 2282 or drop in at the Pilot's office.

FOR WHAT IT'S WORTH

By CLIFFORD P. ROWE

ANY child is familiar with the saying, "Sticks and stones may break my bones, but words will never harm me". This retort, so popular with the youngest set, usually follows a torrent of "tattle tale", "sissy", "scaredy cat", "smart aleck", and other terms used by children to express the dislikes for which their limited vocabularies prove inadequate.

From the signs of the times, voters will soon get an opportunity to observe a similar bombardment of muck-raking and character bespattering. This will be on the adult level, however, and will not be due to the inadequate vocabularies of those participating. Rather it will be due to the fact that politicians still believe that to use reasoning when elections are determined by a stupid public would not only be a waste of time but a reflection on their own intelligence as well.

As in all elections, those who are in will choose to stay; those who are out will be determined to trade positions. Those who are now out, after having been in for a couple of decades, are still frothing at the mouth over their surprising removal. Likewise, those who are now in after a long period away from the trough rather like the situation and will be set to hold on with hands, feet, and the seat of their britches.

As a result, neither group will ever get together on the important issues. The "inners" will bombard us with these parts of their record which they deem the most potent vote getters. The "outers", since they have no record, will claw, fight, scratch, and spit as they endeavor to belittle in the public eye the present office holder. Confining themselves thusly to the tearing down of the character and record of their opponent, their platform is to urge the voter to make his decision for a lesser evil.

They are nearer right than most of us would care to admit. For it is probably very close to the truth that the average person does not vote FOR anything, but AGAINST something. Dislike rather than appreciation influences the casting of our ballot.

Mr. and Mrs. William Phelps are on vacation for two weeks to San Francisco and Salem.

Mrs. Henry Horst, of Clear Lake Oaks, is spending some time in Brookings on business. While in the city she is staying with the Wm. Campbell family.

Highlighting the new fall season, Daly's in Crescent City, will promenade fashion's newest creations tomorrow at a Luncheon Fashion Show to be held at Hotel Surf in that city.

In the picture above, Mrs. Mary Maciel wears one of the exclusive Lilli Ann dresses she will model. In Jet Black it is brilliantly accented with white faille and huge rhinestone studs.

The Buffet Luncheon, which is optional, will be served by the staff of the hotel, commencing at 1:00, with Daly's presenting their fashions at 1:45.

Eight models will parade during the luncheon hour showing many new design suits, coats, dresses, sportswear and children's togs.

In addition to Mrs. Maciel other models will be: Mrs. Taylor Westbrook of Smith River, Mrs. George Fowler, Mrs. Fred Evans, Mrs. W. C. Eichner and Miss Sandra Briery of Crescent City, Mrs. John Trigerero of Klamath and Miss Pat Quackenbush of Gasquet. Modeling childrens clothes will be Candy Fowler and Karen Strating.

Carol Stanbrough, manager of Daly's apparel department, will commentate the entire show. A door prize will be awarded and special musical entertainment will be presented. There is no admission charge, and all are invited to attend.

CPL. CROCKETT IS HOME

Cp. Davey J. Crockett, son of Mr. and Mrs. Donald Crockett, Brookings, arrived home Friday. Cpl. Crockett has spent the past 15 months in Korea, with the 40th division, and the 2nd Division of Smith River, Mrs. Monday at Seattle.
