LETTER TO EDITOR

August 27, 1954

To the Editor:

With due consideration to the city council and other city officials including Mayor Dimmick in his explanation of the Green River Ordinance I request the right to further explain my opposition to the method of enforcement of said ordinance in Brookings.

I recently talked with an attorney (not local) as to the usual procedure of enforcement of the Green River law to protect the citizens of a town. He said this would have to be strictly conversation but that in his town the Green River Ordinance was in effect and definitely was enforced to protect the people but never enforced to protect a business from competition or as a personal weapon. He went on to say that if a representative of a reputable company moved to town and asked about the ordinance there she would be told that as long as there were no complaints from housewives he would not be bothered. But if the Chamber of Commerce or city police were besieged by several phone calls all complaining of a certain salesman entering their home under false pretenses, forcing their way into a home, high-pressuring, or arguing when they were told "no", waking citizens up at night or in other ways making themselves obnoxious, then and only then would this salesman be picked up. On the other hand if a lady called in or came in and said, "a salesman knocked on my door," yet could not claim any of these things had taken place she would be properly classed as a "crank" and no further notice taken of her.

The above consideration is all I have asked of the city of Brookings.

I verily believe that the ordinance here is used to protect the merchants and that the city officials are discriminatory in their enforcement of it. Were this not so, why would one salesman be allowed to "work the city, so to speak while another in fined and given a suspended jail sentence? To be specific, a book salesman came to town and immediately was stopped by local police.

He appealed to a person of the same religion and this prominent business man appealed to the mayor and at least one member of the council who gave their permission for this person to sell in Brookings since his work (supposedly) was of a religious nature. He too receives a commission for each sale he makes which puts him in the class with peddlers and solicitors.

This I claim as one instance of discrimination. My husband and I brought this to the attention of the council at the last meeting yet were still assured that this was done with the best interests of the people of the city of Brookings at heart.

Since the city recorder, Gladys Kanick, felt that it was her duty to sign a complaint for my arrest, I wish to ask if it should not have been her duty to also sign another complaint against another salesman who has recently knocked on her door and talked to her personally in much the same manner as I. This I call personal discrimination by a city employee.

Further personal discrimination has been shown by chief of police Bud Cross, in his failure to arrest the salesperson who made a delivery to his wife in his home and in his presence, collected money for said delivery.

The above statements are not hearsay, they are statements of fact made to me by at least one party directly involved in one instance except in the case of the prominent business man. This statement was made by his wife.

Now I ask on behalf of the people of Brookings that each city official involved make a public statement as to why he or she personally would and did discriminate in his or her enforcement of the Green River ordinance. As Americans, the people of Brookings are entitled to this explanation.

Sincerely,
Anna Moulton.

To te Editor:

Dear Sir:

Last week a portion of Pacific Avenue from Chetco Avenue to Cottage Street was paved 40 feet with a heavy duty layer of asphaltic paving.

This street carries a large volume of heavy traffic into one of our busiest industrial areas and this paving will benefit not only the immediately adjacent business but every private or commercial driver who uses this street.

This paving was done voluntarily and the cost of the project was paid for by Mr. Elmer Bankus who is owner of the adjacent frontage. The only cost to the City of Brookings and its taxpayers was a nominal amount for the establishing of permanent grades and the supervision to see that city standards of construction were met.

Unfortunately, though various other property owners made requests, additional work on this and other streets could not be done at this time.

It shows what can be done and I believe that Mr. Bankus is to be commended for his lead in showing what private enterprise and capital can do for the benefit of all.
