Work Continues On Buildings

In a quick progress report on the new buildings in construction in Brookings: Roy Weideman's crew is laying block for the Weideman - Kessler building, which will be 55 feet deep, and 80 feet long. The building, upon completion, will house the Phillips Dad and Lad store, and the Lesmeister agency. It will be a two story building, with about 4,000 feet of upstairs space for the Elks club. Completion is still expected before the end of the year.

Brookings Building company is ahead of schedule, according to contractor C. F. Campbell, who said that with three or four clear days they could have the roof on the structure. The building is being constructed on the north side of town, and will house three or four retail establishments. Occupation is expected near the first of the year.

E. L. Morton reports that the new U. S. National Bank building bids will be let in the very near future, and that work on the new building would begin as soon after that as possible.

Mr. P. L. Miller of San Rafael, Calif., left Tuesday, after visiting and fishing with his brother, W. F. Miller of Brookings.
