Waldiens Have New Gadget

Mrs. Frank Waldien is having quite a time, up at the ranch on Long Ridge, getting used to modern improvement Bennie Jones hauled out there.

She now has a gas range sitting alongside the old ancestral wood burner and the comparison about has Esther and Frank floored. Frank decided he wanted a mess of corn bread and went to touch off the oven. Because of a time lag between turning on the gas and getting a match fired up, Frank got his first initiation into the thing but didn't damage his hair though the illumination was brilliant.

The oven going good, Esther assayed accumulating the fundamentals of Johnny Cake and proceeded to get it ready to bake. Heretofore, it took quite a spell to get the old wood range to percolating up to Johnny cake baking, and Esther usually had a time interval of an hour or so, but not, she soon found out, with gas. The oven beat the batter to readiness.

Then Frank assayed to get out a batch of hotcakes—lit the gas, put the griddle on, went to stir up the sourdough batter and when he came back the griddle had a fine glow and a couple of humps like a Bachtrian camel.

The new instrument, they've found out, has one advantage and that is when associated with the Java receptacle. Used to be, they could light the old smoke-burner, prepare and put on the coffee and go back to bed for an hour or so. Not when you Cook With Gas they found out. They tried it! No sooner was Esther back for another forty winks than the coffee pot boiled over and a yard or two of flame shot toward the ceiling—and the gas went out!!

After these thrilling episodes it turned out some of the experiences could be charged to Bennie who had quite a bit of fun tiddling with the various valves and regulators, picking up quite a bit of know-how for future use.

Anyhow, Esther and Loretta—and the men folks, too—welcome the new gadget all around. It doesn't heat up the kitchen like the old range did and that's something, when the thermometer is up to 104, as it was the day the new stove was installed.

Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Bollinger observed their forty-eighth wedding anniversary the first day of this month. They were married in Aiken, Minnesota. Mrs. Bollinger's sister and brother, who were with the couple when they were married, were here to help congratulate them again.

Mrs. Ruth Bathiany and Mrs. Rose Poole started out, last weekend, for a visit to Lake of the Woods and Klamath Falls. Mrs. Poole just couldn't stand the heat of the valley and had to lay over and rest at Medford, going on to Lake of the Woods, next day.

To forestall many anticipated squawks about non-delivery or the lateness of last week's PILOT, we are mighty sorry. In the first place, the postal people have made some re-routing which should work toward still better service, out of town. Our addressing system has been decidedly improved with the addition of a gimmick with which, according to the salesman's chatter, we gather we can poke the newspapers in at one end and they'll flip into your mail box automatically. Doesn't seem possible but that's what the man said! 'Twon't do it if you don't keep your subscription up—and that too, The Man says!
