Volunteers To Pay Part Of Lighting Cost

This week a Brookings business man volunteered to pay half the cost of completing the illumination units in the main room of the Chetco Public Library, providing someone else comes forward with the other half. The whole job will cost about $350. At present, only half the room is lighted, the children's section being in darkness.

Several substantial citizens of the area have recently made their first visit to the new Community Library. As usual, all have been agreeably surprised and proud of this civic asset.

Registration of borrowers increases every time the facility opens its doors and as there has been a very substantial addition of books for the youngsters, more children are expected to patronize the stacks. A seasonal increase, both in registration and circulation, is also anticipated and there are several who are doing their bit by subscribing their $2.50 annual association memberships—all so available at the library.

Mr. and Mrs. Stanley Patterson and daughter, have moved in with the Bert DeMosses until their new home is done—which, they're afraid, may be quite a while. Mr. Simmons, piano teacher, bought the Patterson home and he and his mother are living there.

Miss Ruth Woodward is teaching at the Casterland Unified School in the Southern Humboldt district, south of Garberville.

PLYWOOD IS FAR AHEAD OF 1954 MARK

Western fir plywood manufacturers in annual meeting Tuesday mapped plans for pushing plywood demand in 1956 past 5 billion feet amid reports that production this year should be close to a billion feet ahead of 1954.

Some 120 plywood company officials from Washington, Oregon and California heard an announcement that a record number of 10 new firms had joined the industry wide promotion program during the past year.

This program, which combines national sales promotion, quality control, research and testing, is administered by the Douglas Fir Plywood Association for members and subscribers under the direction of a top level management committee made up of industry-elected representatives.

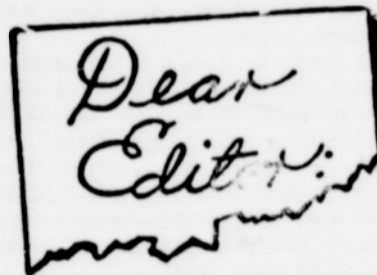

Addition of the ten new firms brings to 84 the number of plywood mills operating under the program. Together they account for close to 90 percent of the industry's total output which should top 4.8 billion feet by the year's end. Current production is already 38 per cent ahead of 1954 for January through mid-September.

Social Security Man To Be Here

A representative of the Eureka office of the Social Security Administration will maintain office hours in the City Hall, Brookings, from 1 until 3 p.m. on the following dates: September 20, October 18, November 15, December 20, and January 17th.

Individuals are requested to see the representative for claiming their Federal old-age and survivors insurance benefits, for checking their social security accounts, or for securing any other information about their old-age and survivors insurance.

Carlos L. Hunsinger, manager of the District Office in Eureka, suggests that if you contemplate seeing the representative some time in the future, you save this itinerary for reference.

TO REPORT ON LIVING CONDITIONS OF WORKERS

Conditions in the camps of migratory workers will be told by Ralph E. Blackman, who will speak at the Brookings Bible Church, Friday evening, September 23rd, at 7:45 p.m. Mr. Blackman will show slides he has taken during his work and will tell of conditions he has found. The lectures and showings will be of special benefit because they relate to conditions which prevail in many localities of the west. The pastor, Rev. E. F. McClain, and his people especially invite all who are interested to attend.

Mr. and Mrs. Jack McCord and five children, have moved up from Humboldt County and are looking for a home. Mrs. McCord will be remembered as the former Jean Jordan, who went to school here.

You, too, can be big cityish and have your very own house number. Numbers have been assigned, and Tuesday night at the council meeting, city work superintendent Ralph Reed reported that the numbers ordered have arrived. Numbers and assignments can be secured at the City Hall, with a cost of 15 cents per number.

Miss Marjorie Coll, of Tensed, Idaho, is at home here visiting her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Daniel Cool, and other relatives in California. She plans to return about the last of September to Tensed, where she has been the last year taking care of her grandmother.
