Courier Comments On Co-op Fracas

The following is a reprint of an editorial published in the Grants Press Courier.

The Coos-Curry Electric Co-operative has got itself mixed up knee deep in politics as the result of the co-op's executive committee endorsement of Senator Wayne Morse for re-election, coupled with a direct attack on his opponent, Douglas McKay.

It is interesting to note that one of the co-op directors is none other than Attorney David C. Shaw, formerly of Gold Beach and now a member of the teaching staff of Oregon university, who was defeated by Congressman Elsworth some years ago and defeated this year by Charles Porter for the Democratic Congressional nomination.

The rank-and-file co-op membership is comprised of both Republicans and Democrats. However, it is reasonable to believe that Shaw had an important part in causing the co-op to adopt a political policy which is not common for such bipartisan business groups.

The Curry County Reporter, published by Shaw's wife, devotes a half page to exchange of communications between contenders in the controversy, with Husband Dave being given twice as much space as the others combined.

Dave probably feels that he helped mastermind a pretty neat political trick before he headed for his new job at Eugene. However, the deal may cut both ways.

We are inclined to believe the co-op board's political action will arouse some of its Republican members to fighting pitch, both in the current general election and in determining the official future of co-op officials.

That's the way such tactics usually work out. FS

Blood Bank Response Good

As this is written, several hundred people have availed themselves of the free blood typing program set up and done by the VFW post and Ladies Auxiliary. The medical profession is highly pleased with the splendid building up of the Walking Blood Bank donor list and appreciation, by the public, of having with them evidence of their personal blood type which has, in many cases, helped doctors in saving time when patients are in need.

But one day remains for the free typing of all who apply, Friday and 22nd from 9 a.m. to 6 p.m.

The response by technicians, locally has been very pleasing. Several have taken time from their business to assist, Mrs. Dick Bordwell, Mrs. Brown, Bowlin and Ed Samuels. Ed will be remembered as having typed around a thousand people three years ago when the program was first started.

There are people who make no mistakes because they never try to do anything worth doing. Goethe

KEEP OREGON GREEN

Registration Deadline Approaching

If you did not vote in the last primaries, if you have since changed your precinct, or if you have changed your name from that under which you were formerly registered, you MUST register before October 6 to be sure you will be allowed to vote in the November 6 general election.

Voters are cautioned they cannot cast their ballots unless their names appear in the poll books of the precinct in which they actually reside or have a certificate from the county clerk they are eligible to vote in the precinct stated on said certificate. This is the law. It is set up to safeguard your ballot.

It is useless to argue with the election boards as they cannot alter the poll books. They are under oath to uphold the law. Before you will receive your ballot you will be required to sign TWO poll books and write in an address sufficient to prove your eligibility to vote in that precinct. There is a very heavy penalty for violation of the precinct residence law.

Should you move from the precinct in which you are registered between October 6 and November 6, your name will appear in the poll books of the precinct you moved from and there you may vote.

A common failure, peculiar to women, is their negligence in their legal name and are, thereby violating the law when they sign the poll books in the presence of election board officials who are sworn to conduct the balloting in accordance with the statutes.

The burden of seeing that your legal name is on the poll books of your precinct is UP TO YOU!

BROOKINGS TO O'BRIEN VIA CHETCO PEAK

Now that preliminary work tending toward ocean navigation from the Port of Brookings is underway with the quarter million dollar project at the mouth of the Chetco, road facilities to the east, specifically toward Grants Pass, are being eyed, industrially. While other agencies will undoubtedly act, in due time, private enterprise is reported to be seriously considering punching a commercial road from Vulcan Peak, in the upper reaches of the Chetco to Oregon Mountain and thence to O'Brien some sixteen miles inside Oregon on Hiway 199.

There are extensive mineral deposits being worked in the vicinity of Vulcan Peak and others would undoubtedly be developed but for the prohibitive cost of transportation. Timber resources there might be worth looking into if they could be profitably brought to market. The western end of the route, from Brookings up to the upper bridge is being developed by the Forest Service. From Oregon Mountain there is an improved, double lane road down in to O'Brien. Between a quite passable road out to Vulcan Peak and Oregon Mountain there is a route, of sorts, possibly around 20 miles.
