OPEN LETTER

TO OUR CONGRESSMEN:

Gentlemen: As our elected delegates to the United States Congress we turn to you for assistance at this time. We feel that you represent the people, and this is one way we have of making our wishes known to you.

You realize, of course, that the lumber market has taken a severe drop in recent months, you know, of course, that the building and contracting industry has suffered during the past few months. New homes and new building has fallen off. The lumber and plywood industrys are not receiving any of the benefits of what the economists are calling the "great prosperity."

Gentlemen, we believe that the trouble lies in what is commonly known as the "tight money" policies of our government. Money is not being made available, at a reasonable interest rate, and consequently there is no building.

We respectfully, would like to call for action in this matter. Do what you can, but please let's g't started! Unemployment is at a very high level here, and although the situation is serious enough now it could get even worse.
