COUNCIL HAS SPECIAL SESSION

The Brookings city council held a special meeting on Tuesday night to change their budget hearing date to July 18th.

They also heard Fire Chief Val Mendenhall report that he has discovered seven or eight fireplaces in the city that are "hazardous". He said that there are probably more like that too, all built by the same contractor within the last few years.

Mendenhall reported that the fireplaces have wood frames too close to the fire. He said that the building inspection wasn't done right or it would have been caught then. Mendenhall said that the city could do what they wanted in the matter, but the group took no action pending legal advice.

BUDGET PLANS

Continued.....

"The public at large will receive many times over the value of any tax assessment, both in cash returns to the community, and public utilization of the facilities", the committee announced. "With full use of the boat launching site, we can expect literally hundreds of sport fishermen to bring their boats here to enjoy the superlative fishing available in this area. Visitors from outside this community spend their money while visiting here, and contribute much to the general welfare of the city, while receiving many benefits from the use of our facilities. In addition, this project will add much to the recreational possibilities for our local citizens, through affording increased opportunities for the enjoyment of fishing and water sports."

Sport fishing locations up the coast from Brookings enjoy a widespread use from all over the valley. Hundreds of boats use the Winchester Bay facilities each weekend during the summer, as is the case at Depot Bay and others on the coast. This area could enjoy a great deal of patronage from boating enthusiasts in the Medford-Grants Pass area, as well as north of here, it was pointed out. California residents, who now use the Smith River grounds extensively, would welcome an additional place to fish.

The commission expects that much of the commercial development of the Port will be done by private capital, costing the taxpayers nothing, but contributing materially to the normal operating costs. These would of course include moorage space and dock facilities for commercial fishermen, and would no doubt necessitate the construction of fish handling and processing plants, as well as the future development of the shrimp grounds lying just off our coast. The crab fishermen also would operate extensively out of this port, inasmuch as the season is more desirable to commercial fishing boats and their operators than that of California.

It was further pointed out that much of the salmon and crab is obtained offshore from Oregon but is taken to California ports and sold, contributing nothing to the state of Oregon. State taxes on the catch would be collected here from boats shipping out of this port, and the employes required to process the catch would come from this community, further contributing to the economy of the area. It was emphasized that some 100 women are employed by the shrimp processors in the Crescent City area, and there is no reason why Brookings should not develop a similar industry.
