Swimmer's Safety Tips

With the outdoor season getting into full swing and beaches and pools welcoming bathers, it's time to think of some simple safety rules, such as those illustrated here. An average of 7,000 people lose their lives annually by drowning. About 50 per cent of these deaths are the result of playing in the water. The other 50 per cent happen as a result of accidents such as being pushed into the water or falling from upset boats. It's a good thing to remember that drowning accidents have only two potentials—either death or complete recovery.
