

PILOT PICTORIAL REVIEW

BUSY LABOR DAY WEEKEND SHOWN IN PICTURES

It was an active Labor Day weekend, both in and around this area, and at the State Fair in Salem, as these pictures show. At left is a couple of the men, trying to ride some of the wild critters at the Brookings Rodeo held Sunday. The second picture shows Fred Blunt, himself, about to bite the dust. Below is shown a local boy, calmly perched on a calf. It looks easy but most of the youngsters--or adults didn't stay on long. Fred Blunt and Warren McNeely, co-sponsors of the show are shown helping one lad on one of the fighting animals. Below that are scenes from the state fair.

The first state fair photo, taken by a Pilot staff photographer, shows C. H. Brooks of Langlois, who installed the Curry County booth at the fair, handing out smoked salmon, courtesy of the Cedar Lane Cannery in Harbor. The salmon was the big draw of the booth, and hundreds of people came over to sample the goods. Other pictures across the bottom of the page show people watching the Curry booth. Brooks said that he passed out several hundred Brookings brochures, recently printed by the Pilot, and many, many people expressed interest in the community. Several general scenes of the fair are shown, with the judging of the cattle, by 4-H youngsters. At upper right of the picture page is shown a local gal, just about ready to head into the turf. She was the only girl riding the calves, and received a big hand from the crowd.

State Fair Photos by Hudson Reeves

