LIBRARY LANDSCAPING PROGRESSES

Making the Chetco Community Library grounds a show place is in the immediate offing. The institution, itself, is regarded by Northwest library authorities as unique in its accomplishments and has been awarded special attention with a strong possibility of further study.

After many years' work the library, as such, is more than proving the hopes of the early planners. Others are now well along toward beautifying the grounds about the building. Tom McKenzie, a board member, made a topographical map of the grounds. This was worked on by Gary Wimberly who has plotted an underground irrigation system and offered further work in its installation. Harry Lockland came up with cost estimates for the irrigation system and Hanscans' Store is offering a very attractive bargain on the required materials, which will cost in the neighborhood of $500.

McKenzie says it would be very desirable to have a few yards of coarse crushed rock to place on the Redwood street front as a kind of retaining wall.

The immediate need is the installation of the irrigation system so planting will not be until there is a probability of a rain soon.

The Library Association is being contacted for help in the financing of the project. It is this association, together with others, who, over several years supplied the community with the library and donated it to the public.
