DEATH OF MR. BRYAN SHOCK TO COUNTRY

The Entire country was shocked Sunday when news of the death of Hon. Wm. Jennings Bryan was passed around. He laid down life's burdens and breathed his last at the scene of one of the greatest battles of his long career of struggling for Truth and Righteousness, at Dayton, Tenn. Death probably came without a moment's warning, and very peacefully. In the death of Mr. Bryan, America loses one of her greatest men. For years he has stood at the head of the small army who have been contending for the truths of the Bible against the great wave of Evolutionary teaching which is sweeping over the world. In the ranks of these Fundamentalists, where will a man be found who will put on the armor and weapons laid down by this righteous warrior? Someone must truly rise to carry on the fight for truth in America, as Mr. Bryan has been taken away at the time when the battle tide is seemingly at its height. While Mr. Bryan made mistakes as all great men have done and are still doing, but even his most severe critics are agreed that he did such a great volume of good for our fair land the mistakes sink into insignificance. We bow our heads in solemn mourning in remembrance of this great hero and statesman.

Time Spent in Sleep Pays Big Dividends

Spanish siesta at midday never gained a foothold north of the Rio Grande; nor has going to sleep at 10 p. m. been as thorough in its practice as it needs to be.

True "early to bed and early to rise, and you meet very few prominent people," but this only makes apparent that any effective propaganda must be directed toward the prominent people. They will have to set the fashion, if it is ever set, a writer in the St. Louis Globe-Democrat remarks.

Sleep, enough of it, is superior to the work of beauty parlors; it knits up the raveled sleeve of care and unkinks the wrinkles. Why not have the balls and parties at five o'clock in the morning, when everybody looks pretty?

In mythological history, we learn that the festivities on Olympus and in Valhalla's halls were not markedly reserved for the night hours. What the gods did at night is not made entirely clear, but we have every reason to believe that darkness was the revelling time only for the evil gods. The well-behaved ones preferred the sunshine.

A favorite tune—Fortune.

An immense rope—Europe.

Becoming casehardened—lawyers.

For cross purposes—Streets.

TIMES WILL RUN GREAT SERIAL STORY SOON

If you are not now a subscriber to the Willamina Times, don't fail to hand in your name before the middle of August. About September 1, the Times will turn into a larger newspaper and will contain many new and special features that will be pleasing to our readers. Among the real special features to be run will be the "So Big" story written by Edna Ferber, pronounced the greatest American story of American life written in 1924. This story is a real "American" story indeed. It tells of a hard fought struggle to gain a place in the sun by a truly American boy. Many other features will be run every week in the Times. The added expense will of necessity call for a larger income, so we have decided to raise the subscription price to $2.00 per year. We have already heard words of approval from some of our good readers, and feel sure that all will be glad to co-operate with the Times management. From time to time we will tell our readers of the new features which will be run, and we feel sure that you will not only welcome a larger and better newspaper, but will be glad to help all you can in making the venture a success. As we announced last week, subscriptions or renewals will be accepted up to October 1st at the old rate of
