Sanctions

RECENT actions by the League of Nations in Geneva have brought to the attention of men a meaning of the word "sanction" which is somewhat unfamiliar to many people. It may be defined as that which is designed to induce the observance of law or to preserve the integrity of mutual agreements. The applying of sanctions to a nation which has disregarded a covenant may be considered by that nation as coercive or as punitive, while other nations would regard the application of sanctions as a means of correction to the offender, and of protection to others.

It will be acknowledged by any Bible student that Jesus understood, obeyed, and demonstrated the will or law of God. He said, as we are told in John (5:29), "I can of mine own self do nothing; as I hear, I judge: and my judgment is just; because I seek not mine own will, but the will of the Father which hath sent me." And, in showing that the will or law of God is beneficent in its effect, the Master healed the sick, gave sight to the blind, and hearing to the deaf; he liberated the sin-bound, and overcame death.

Those who have entertained a concept of God as manlike, as liable to changeableness and wrath, may have thought of the operation of divine law—sanctions, if you please—as implying suffering, and perhaps everlasting punishment. It may be that they have been told by theologians, who evidently were not acquainted with God as Jesus knew Him, that sickness and suffering, disaster and distress, were inflicted or permitted by God for some inscrutable purpose. Such, indeed, was the generally accepted opinion of religious teachers when Mary Baker Eddy learned through prayer and study of the Bible that God, the creator of all that is true, is Love, impartial and universal good, and that divine law, therefore, is always harmonizing and beneficent in its effect.

On page 229 of the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures," Mrs. Eddy makes this appealing and liberating statement: "If God causes man to be sick, sickness must be good, and its opposite, health, must be evil, for all that He makes is good and will stand forever. If the transgression of God's law produces sickness, it is right to be sick; and we cannot if we would, and should not if we could, annul the decrees of wisdom. It is the transgression of a belief of mortal mind, not of a law of matter nor of divine Mind, which causes the belief of sickness. The remedy is Truth, not matter,—the truth that disease is unreal." The recognition and realization of these truths has brought healing of sickness to many who had been given up by physicians, even as was promised by Christ Jesus.

Christian sanctions, then, are corrective rather than coercive; they imply pardon and peace, instead of pain and punishment, to all who acknowledge and obey the law of God, good. In other words, we have Scriptural authority for believing that as we yield to the urge of spiritual law, as we acknowledge and obey the law of divine Principle, we shall realize and manifest the purifying, harmonizing, and liberating effects which bespeak God as the loving Father-Mother of man and the universe. To be sure, those who willfully disobey the moral law are punished by their disobedience, because "whatsoever a man soweth, that shall he also reap," as Paul wrote to the Galatians. . . .

Christian Science exposes selfishness, greed, injustice, passion, and human will as manifestations of the mortal or carnal mind, which is enmity against God, Truth. These evil beliefs, therefore, may be recognized as falsities to be denied and not feared.

As we thus apply the Christianly scientific remedy—corrective sanctions—in our own thinking and living, it is inevitable that we shall consciously come under the protecting and pacifying influence of the law of divine Love. . . . —The Christian Science Monitor.

Notes==

--- NO! --- we are not talking of those notes that "go 'round and 'round --- oh --- oh --- oh --- and some more" --- remember??? Of course you do --- you can't forget --- that little note that Susan wrote and boy, you thought it sure was fine, and when you read it, it simply said "I hope you'll be my Valentine."

Well --- we still believe in notes --- but let's not mention those I. O. U's. That's different --- however, here is a note --- a nice note --- not so nice as Susan's, of course not, but the New Philco with the all-metal tubes and at the price, you'll certainly note that here is the radio of note that will bring you all the notes that go 'round and 'round, and 'round, and that you'd hardly even note the I. O. U. note, if and when.

AT THE WILLAMINA THEATRE

Thunder storms and blunder storms, and the wild head-on crash of two railroad locomotives laden with dynamite, are only a few of the highlights in "The Rainmakers" latest RKO comedy feature starring those two irre-pressibles, Bert Wheeler and Robt. Woolsey. The sky is the limit where these two court jesters of filmdom are concerned. Efforts to bring down rain upon the wasted fields of a farming community furnish the material for this film filled with laughter and spectacular features. See it, Saturday night, February 15.

Then on Wednesday comes the great character star, George Arliss, in "Cardinal Richelieu." This is a dramatic presentation of a famous historical figure—the power behind the throne during the reign of Louis XIII in France. Supported by Edward Arnold, Violet Cooper, Caesar Romeo, and a strong supporting cast.

MEAT ANIMAL SALES

Marketing meat animals alive on the Portland market is generally more profitable than marketing them as country-dressed carcasses, especially with veal, but freight rates on less than full truck loads are such that shipping dressed is the only outlet to the small producer, in many cases.

Such is one of several conclusions reached in a study of the marketing of country-dressed meat in Portland conducted by members of the animal husbandry department at Oregon State college and just published in bulletin form.

The study revealed that 83 per cent of the calves, 27 per cent of the sheep and lambs, 11 per cent of the hogs and 4 per cent of the cattle used in Portland for meat are country-killed. Most of these come from western Oregon, as many parts of eastern Oregon enjoy freight arrangements making it possible to ship smaller numbers alive.

Yamhill county shipped the largest volume of country-dressed sheep, lambs and hogs at the time the study was made; Linn county the most veal, and Multnomah county the most cattle. Washington county was next with veal and hogs, and Marion second with sheep and lambs.
