Dog flu still poses threat

Canine parvovirus or "dog flu" made a lot of news headlines last year. It is still with us and probably will be from now on. The virus causes severe diarrhea and vomiting in dogs. Young dogs are particularly affected. Death can result in the worst cases.

Local St. Helens veterinarians report sporadic outbreaks have been seen throughout the year. They usually follow dry weather. The fear is that there will be another major outbreak like the one last year.
