

Gallon Club Members

We aren't thinking of those with an unquenchable thirst, or of those who might have a gallon of one kind of beverage or another cached away in the cellar. But we have in mind, those, who a few years ago, answered the appeal of The American Red Cross, by contributing a pint of blood in anticipation that it would save the life of a wounded serviceman.

These blood donors, after giving the first pint, found that it was so easy, costing nothing as most donations are considered, merely sacrificing a little time from their jobs, which their employers gladly arranged, that they eagerly looked forward to the time when they would be permitted to offer another pint.

With this loyal humanitarian desire in their hearts, they kept on with their donations and now each has contributed a Gallon.

LET'S GO, STATE EMPLOYEES.

We need more Gallon Club members. Remember it doesn't cost anything. A pint invested pays LIFE dividends. We know of several instances where those having High Blood Pressure, have had this condition greatly reduced after making a few donations. So it is not only a gesture of loyalty but also an aid to one's health.

We have compiled a list of State Employees who have become members of this coveted Club, which no doubt is incomplete. It is rather difficult to obtain the names of all members due to the fact that they are scattered throughout the state, so if any of you OSEA members know of a State Employee who has made eight or more donations, send the Employee's name and the number of donations, to Lowell E. Shinn, 2145 Chemeketa, Salem, Oregon, and they will appear in the following issue of "The Oregon State Employee."

The Japanese boy is trained to go to a place, stay there, fight and die. We train our men to go to a place, to fight, to win and to live. I can assure you, it is a better theory.
